Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Harrises guilty of kidnap rap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

Day camp for Cubs at Kimball Hill Park

Cub Scouts from Rolling Meadows, Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect are participating in a week-long Sauk Woods District day camp, at Kimball Hill Park, Rolling Meadows.

The park is located just north of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center on Kirchoff Road, and the entrance is at the west end of the shopping center parking lot.

Boys attending the camp will participate in a physical fitness program, sports, nature lore and crafts classes.

Cub Scouts also will work to earn Webelos activity pins and Scout awards that will be presented Friday.

$73,000 track tax payment goes to village

Arlington Heights has received approximately $73,000 as its first admission tax payment from Arlington Park Race Track.

The village this year receives a 10-cent-per-person admission tax because of a new state racing law passed in December 1975.

The first check is for the first two months of the racing season, said Kenneth Bonder, village finance director.

The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the race season when it ends Oct. 2, Bonder said.

"THIS WAS THE balancing factor in the (village's) budget this year," he said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admissions tax) helped us to keep the services we had right on par."

The law, called the Illinois Racing Act, reduced the state's admission tax at racetracks from 40 to 15 cents per person and added the authority for local governments to levy a 10-cent-per-person admission tax.

Before the bill was passed, Arlington Heights officials had discussed the possibility of a local admission tax at Arlington Park.

Based on previous attendance figures at the Arlington Park, Bonder originally estimated that the village would receive about $175,000 through the tax this year. It still may be possible to reach that figure because of the long racing season and recent promotions at the track, he said.

Balanced Dist. 214 budget seen

The 1976-77 tentative budget for High School Dist. 214 that calls for expenditures of $48 million, a 6.63 per cent increase from last year's $45 million budget, will permit a balanced budget, school officials said Monday.

"We should live within our revenues," said board member John Costello. He said surplus funds totaling more than $7 million in the five major accounts will allow the district to prevent deficit spending this year although expenditures will exceed new revenue by about $2 million.

THE DISTRICT anticipates receiving $46 million from property taxes, state aid and other sources in the five major funds—the education, building bond and interest, transportation and retirement funds. The 1976-77 revenue is expected to be 16.5 per cent greater than last year's revenue of $39.6 million.

The district also anticipates receiving $55,000 in the site and construction fund and an additional $1.1 million in the working cash fund. The working cash fund which will total $15.2 million this year, can be used for loans to other funds.

The revenue projections also do not include potential additional tax revenue from the elimination of the tax rate rollback—a state mandate which requires the district to lower its tax rate. Last week, Gov. Daniel Walker tentatively approved a bill which would eliminate the requirement for cutting the tax rate.

Roderick McLennan, associate superintendent for instructional services, said the amount of additional funds that might be realized from the bill's provisions is not known at this time.

THE BUDGET calls for an 8.8 per cent increase in expenditure in the education fund from $31.9 million last year to $34.8 million this year. The education fund includes salary increases averaging 11 per cent for teachers for the 1976-77 school year and administration salary increases.

Life here too fast for ya? Doc agrees; he's leavin'

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

FORMER WHEELING Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson stands outside courtroom at Cook County Criminal Court Building. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to bribery and official misconduct charges in connection with a zoning variation request by a village company.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Human services coordinator

Geiss gives 'people' 2nd chance

by BONITA BRODT

Ed Geiss is a man who likes to be challenged.

He works to help people — a job that has backfired and kicked him in the face several times when his efforts haven't been openly recognized or appreciated. But he is a determined man who works to conquer the challenges that face him.

And it's that kind of determination that Geiss has put into his first two weeks as the Arlington Heights human services coordinator for the village health department.

At this point, Geiss, 37, said he is just "getting his feet wet" in the newly created position. But there is an easily recognized enthusiasm transmitted from this man that he says he has enjoyed his first two weeks of working with people in Arlington Heights.

AND THAT IS easy to understand.

Geiss has a long and impressive background of wanting to help and understand people. After four years of theological education in Mexico, Geiss was a missionary for five years in Peru.

His experiences in Latin America taught him quite a bit about American stereotypes and how to better communicate with people.

ED GEISS

"I dreaded the fact that people would think of me as an American, so I studied everything about the cultures that I could. You can't go into another culture and push your own ideals and beliefs, because you will be shunned and stereotyped as the gringo," Geiss said.

GEISS AVOIDED the stereotype by walking to the places he had to go. Later, when he saved up enough money, he bought a motorcycle. He had studied enough language in college to fit in comfortably with the Spanish-speaking people there. And when someone would peg him for a "gringo, Yankee or exploiter" he would confront them, ask them why and discuss the difficulty.

But, he had his problems.

"I was away from home, giving everything I had to help the people, and then I would get kicked in the face," he said.

"One time, I was trying to raise money for an athletic field for the community. We had a fiesta, as they called it and I knew of one person who was stealing money from the fiesta. So, instead of approaching one man, I decided to make a general statement about the situation in one of my messages," he said.

"The same people I called my friends betrayed me to the government. I was called before their equivalent of the FBI and reprimanded for preaching against the dictatorship," he said.

AND AFTER a while, he questioned his effectiveness.

"I constantly wondered what I was really doing there. I wondered if I had served my purpose, and I wanted time to re-evaluate what I wanted to do with my life," he said.

So, he left the active ministry and moved to Park Forest, where he set up a construction firm and drove a taxi on the side. He also married his wife, Pat.

"But there was such a difference in that kind of work," he said. "There was no human element, just boards and nails. It was the easy way out. I got good pay, but I wasn't satisfied," he said.

THAT'S WHEN HE decided to give the "people" business another try. Through his friends, he learned of the job opening for the human services coordinator in Arlington Heights. He is anxious about what he can accomplish in the position.

His efforts in the first two weeks have been concentrated on the village programs for the elderly. In about two more weeks, he hopes to have an over-all evaluation of the programs which will detail if the village is using the taxpayer's money wisely and if there are any abuses in the various programs.

He also will try to establish a definite goal for the programs, something that he says was never clearly considered when the programs began.

Although the long-term responsibilities of his office have not yet been determined, he knows that he will be carrying out a similar study of the village programs for youth.

"I like working with people. It may not be the simplest job, but you get something out of it. As long as I know I am doing something that has goals to reach for, it will be worthwhile," he said.

Suburbs focus of meter tampering: Edison chief

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

Gale winds of hurricane Belle lash Long Island

At Waterford, Conn., Gov. Ella T. Grasso stationed 20 National Guard medics at a school for mentally and physically handicapped children after the school superintendent said it would be more dangerous to move the children than to keep them inside the school, which was protected by a six-foot seawall.

On Long Island, more than 12,000 persons, including 6,000 vacationers on Fire Island, moved to high ground. But 60 diehards refused to budge from their Fire Island homes and held a "hurricane party."

"Unfortunately, we do not have any authority to physically remove people," said Norman Kelly, Suffolk County Director for Emergency Preparedness.

National Weather Service meteorologist Mike Faine recalled another hurricane "party" in Missippi when Hurricane Comille swept across the state in 1969. "They lost about 200 people in that little party, and ever since then people have had a little more respect for hurricanes," he said.

Major airlines canceled flights to and from airports at New York, Newark, N.J., and Boston.

In New York Cityn many businesses, including the stock exchanges, closed early to allow workers to get home ahead of the storm's thrust. More than 600 persons canceled dinner reservations at the Windows On the World restaurant on top of the quarter-mile-tall World Trade Center. But many were not frightened away. "I don't believe in storms," said William Luce, culture editor of the New York Times. "Besides it's a great place to watch a storm."

As Belle moved northward it remained far enough off the Atlantic coast to prevent serious damage and vacationers who had been evacuated earlier moved back to their cottages.

"It's not nearly as bad as we first expected," said Ocean City, Md., police spokesman James Lockard. "It was far enough offshore that it didn't do any damage."

At Cape Hatteras, N.C., an estimated 40,000 vacationers were taken to shelters early Monday but began to return to coastline resorts by midafternoon. "Many went back, saying 'gee whiz, we're on a vacation and we don't want to go home,' " said Jack Hohmann of the Dare County Red Cross.

YOUNGSTERS HELP board up their ocean front cottage at New York's Rockaway beach as hurricane Belle sped northward packing 110 m.p.h. winds Monday. Weather service spokesman ordered all beach areas along Long Island's coast evacuated. Earlier Belle struck a passing blow in N.C.

FBI briefing on Roselli case sought

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Monday he will ask the FBI and the CIA to provide any information it has regarding the murder of John Roselli, a roaring '20s rum runner, underworld strong-arm man and gambler who testified he made several CIA-sanctioned attempts to assassinate Fidel Castro. Baker, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said he will ask FBI Director Clarence Kelley and CIA Director George Bush to provide him with a "full briefing" on the case. Baker also said he would talk with committee chairman Sen. Daniel Inouye about whether the panel should probe the possible links between the gangland-style slaying of Roselli and Sam Giancana, who was gunned down in his fortress-like home in Chicago in June of 1975.

Bulldozers clear Colorado flood debris

Colorado bulldozer operators, inoculated against typhoid and tetanus and warned to watch for buried flood victims., Monday cleared debris from the flood-ruined Big Thompson Canyon. Only 87 bodies have been found since a flash flood roared through the narrow Rocky Mountain canyon nine days ago, twisting homes, smashing cars and killing an estimated 200 persons. The Red Cross lists 800 as missing. "Many of the bodies may be buried 10 feet down in the mud," said Larimer County Sheriff Bob Watson. "Some may have been carried to Nebraska and there may be some we will never find."

Senate OKs defense appropriations bill

The Senate Monday passed its $104 billion version of the defense appropriations bill, containing nearly everything the Pentagon asked, but which left the controversial BI bomber question to be settled later. The Senate, after a six-hour floor debate on two major weapons systems, voted 82 to 6 to pass the appropriations bill practically intact. The congressional cuts in the administration's request were the smallest in recent history. Combined, the House and the Senate cut about $4 billion from the Defense Department budget request for fiscal year 1977. Different views must be reconciled when the two versions are hammered into a compromise bill by a conference committee.

Spanish military plane crash kills 10

A Spanish military transport plane carrying 33 persons — officers, their wives and children — crashed in flames Monday near the coastal city of Cadiz, Spain, on a flight to the Canary Islands. Police said 10 persons were killed and the other 23 aboard were injured. A communique from the Air Force Ministry in Madrid said the cause of the accident was under investigation, but officers said one of the DC4's four engines caught fire. The propeller-driven plane crashed in a hilly, wooded area 12 miles east of Cadiz, setting off a forest fire that firemen were still battling six hours later.

Police fire on Johannesburg rioters

Police fired into crowds of black rioters in suburban Johannesburg, S. Africa, Monday, killing two persons and wounding several more in a renewed nationwide outburst of antigovernment protests. The shootings raised to 11 the number of fatalities recorded since the current round of black protests began Wednesday. At least 36 persons were hospitalized with gunshot wounds. Police were on full nationwide alert.

Heavy fighting flares in Beirut

Heavy fighting flared through Beirut Monday and a Greek freighter allegedly ferrying arms to leftists and Palestinians in Tyre exploded and sank in a sabotage attack that blocked the southern port. Suburban battles spread to Beirut's shell-battered commercial neighborhoods, shattering a week-long lull that had prevailed during abortive efforts to renegotiate a cease-fire.

Quake again jolts North China

Earthquake-ravaged north China received another jolt Monday from a "considerably strong" aftershock centered in the Peking area, but no immediate reports of damage or injury were received.

The Royal Observatory in Hong Kong said it picked up a slight tremor centered in the general region of Peking, where the July 28 quake caused widespread death and destruction. The Uppsala Seismological Institute in Sweden said the latest quake measured an estimated 5.8 magnitude on the open-ended Richter scale but its exact center could not be determined.

Greece, Turkey go on war footing

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Greece and Turkey put their armed forces on a war footing Monday in their dispute over potential oil riches in the Aegean Sea, sources in both countries reported.

The Greek government handed its second protest note in three days to Turkey and summoned the ambassadors of the United States, Britain, West Germany and France to brief them on the crisis.

The confrontation threatened to bring to a head the Greek-Turkish dispute over Cyprus that has weakened the eastern flank of NATO. Both nations are members of the Atlantic alliance.

The two governments officially appeared to be playing down the seriousness of the situation. Athens denied any special measures were being taken and Turkish Premier Suleyman Demirel said in Istanbul there was "no cause for alarm."

But military sources in Athens said Greek armed forces and navy ships had been ordered into attack positions along confrontation lines with Turkey.

They said ships destined for maneuvers in other parts of the Aegean were diverted toward a group of islands where the Turkish research ship Sismik 1 was making seismic oil probes in disputed waters. Last month, Greece warned it would consider such tests a hostile act.

In addition, troops were moved into their battle stations along the Greek-Turkish frontier and in the islands lying in full view of the Turkish mainland, the sources said.

In Izmir, Turkey, witnesses said Turkish troops had also been put on a war footing, with unconfirmed reports the air force had been placed on "red alert," signifying full readiness.

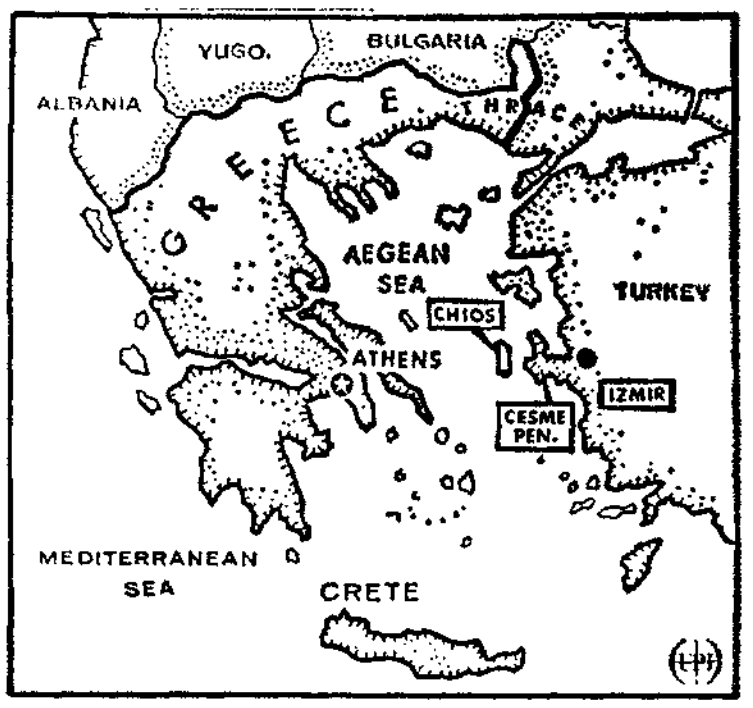
The witnesses said amphibious units of Turkey's Izmir-based 4th Army moved into combat-ready positions on the Cesme peninsula that juts out into the Aegean to within three miles of the Greek island of Chios.

Other witnesses reported convoys of military supply vehicles, their ensigns hooded to prevent unit identification, moving toward the Turkish-Greek border in Thrace.

In Istanbul, Demirel told reporters, "No one can stop the working plan set out for Sismik 1."

George Mavros, leader of the Democratic Center Union party, said the government intended to submit the crisis to the United Nations Security Council "because it threatens world peace."

Emerging from a meeting with Premier Constantine Caramanlis, Mavros blamed the United States for encouraging Turkish intransigence in the Aegean and said American bases had "no place" in Greece.



TURKEY DEPLOYED amphibious army units along its west coast Monday as tension with Greece over Aegean seabed riches mounted. Witnesses said Ismir-based Turkish units moved into combat-ready positions on the Cesme peninsula within three miles of the Greek island of Chios. Athens sources said Greek armed forces and naval fleet moved into attack positions.

Patty Hearst faces same charges

Jury finds Harris couple guilty

pective member of the panel wandered around an assembly room with a small hangman's noose, dangling it before other prospective jurors.

Weinglass pointed out there had been other incidents, involving a member of the panel allegedly saying the outcome was a foregone conclusion, the discovery of an old newspaper — headlining Hearst kidnaping developments — in the jury bathroom and the erection of a small, mock gallows on a table in the jury room before the jury was selected.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler denied the defense motion for a mistrial but agreed to have the jurors brought in for questioning about any possible prejudice in the case.

One of those singled out as having made the remark about the case being a foregone conclusion was Ronald Pruyn, an insurance executive.

The packed court room first heard the clerk of the court read six verdicts of innocent against both Harrises on charges of assault with a deadly weapon for the bursts of automatic carbine fire that peppered the front of an Inglewood sporting goods store.

The shooting in May, 1974 and the subsequent 22-hour spree by the Harrises and Miss Hearst, alerted police that the SLA was in Los Angeles, leading to the discovery of the band's hideout where six hard core "urban guerillas" — including their leader, Donald "General Field Marshal Cinque" DeFreeze — were killed in a fiery gunbattle.

Miss Hearst was the only one to fire any shots at the sporting goods store, according to the Harris' defense in the three-week-long trial. She admitted at her federal bank robbery trial in San Francisco that she did, saying it was a "reflex action."

The Harrises, legally liable for her conduct if they acted jointly, had argued in effect that she alone was responsible for the shooting — and was such a bad shot they were potential victims, not accomplices.

The jury apparently agreed.

The jury then found both Harrises guilty on two counts of car theft, for commandeering two autos during their flight.

Raymond Burr's last week at Drury Lane canceled

Miss Butner, 35-23-36, won the $500 prize. Moore, 30, received $250 with his title.

Panel nixes motion for Ford to name running mate

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Ronald Reagan's campaign manager, John Sears, urged Monday that the GOP National Convention require President Ford to announce a running mate before Republicans nominate their presidential candidate.

The Republican's temporary rules committee overwhelmingly turned down the motion but Sears said he would take the issue all the way to the convention floor if necessary, bringing an early, clear-cut showdown between Ford and Reagan.

In a surprise maneuver, Sears proposed that the 1976 convention rules mandate that a candidate name his vice presidential partner by 9 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18 — about 12 hours before the Republicans pick between Reagan and Ford.

Under Sears' "trust the delegates" plan, should Ford refuse, all delegates pledged to him would be freed. There are a number of delegates — perhaps enough to decide the tightly contested fight for the presidential nomination — who back Reagan but are now bound to Ford.

The latest UPI tally gave Ford 1,120 votes, Reagan 1,038. It will take 1,130 to go over the top.

Reagan named Pennsylvania Sen. Richard Schweiker as his potential partner on the GOP national ticket. Ford has ignored demands that he reveal his choice.

A week before the opening of the 31st National Convention — which promised the first real contest for the presidential nomination since 1952 — the Ford and Reagan forces joined forces in an effort to avert a party-splitting fight over the 1976 platform.

Top strategists for the two candidates were seeking common ground on platform acceptable to both and trying to isolate conservatives, led by Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, who want a tough, pro-Reagan plank.

The absence of Rep. Silvio Conte of Massachusetts gave the Reagan forces the chairmanship of a major subcommittee and narrowed Ford's hold on the key executive committee which drafts the platform.

Conte, a Ford supporter, was chairman of the subcommittee on Human Rights and Responsibiliteis in a Free Society. But Conte was not in Kansas City and was deposed as chairman.

The subcommittee then named co-chairman Charles Pickering of Mississippi to replace Conte and then elected Dorothy Zumwalt of Oklahoma, another Reagan backer, as co-chairman. Mrs. Zumwalt beat Conte 7-6.

The executive committee is composed of chairmen and co-chairmen of the seven subcommittees and Conte's absence cut Ford's edge from 9-5 to 8-6.

In announcing his proposal, Sears said "It is a simple notice rule. It says 'trust the delegates.' "

As the political maneuvering continued, Ford celebrated his second anniversary in the presidency by confidently working on his acceptance speech for the convention. He is optimistic he has the delegates to triumph over Reagan on the first ballot Aug. 18 in Kansas City, Mo.

24% traffic death jump in last year

Traffic fatalities in Illinois increased 24 per cent to 220 during July 1976, compared with the 198 for the same period in 1975, according to statistics released Monday by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation and Illinois State Police in Chicago. The increase was the largest of any month this year, according to the preliminary statistics. The report also showed 1,158 fatalities for the first seven months of 1976, or 7 per cent more than the 1,085 deaths for the same period of 1975 and 15 per cent higher than in the first seven months of 1974. There were 116 one-car accidents resulting in 121 deaths, and multiple vehicle accidents took 99 deaths. Cook County, as expected, was highest in July 1976 fatals with 77.

New Chicago FBI chief named

FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley Monday named William F. Beane to replace Richard G. Held as special agent in charge of the agency's Chicago Office. Beane, 50, a 25-year veteran of the FBI, had been in charge of the criminal division of the FBI's New York office. Held recently was named associate director under Kelley.

Beane headed the investigation of the Barbara Jane Mackle ransom-kidnaping in 1968, and the Bronfman kidnaping case in New York in 1975 when a ransom of $2 to $3 million was paid, according to the FBI.

Delegate leaning to Ford if . . .

Mrs. Patricia Hans, an uncommitted GOP delegate from Illinois, said Monday she will vote for President Ford if he names a conservative as his running mate. "I'm quite sure I would," she said. "I'm looking for electability and mine is a conservative district." Mrs. Hans, 51, has been in Republican politics 30 years, and was campaign manager for former state Sen. Robert Hatch and state Rep. Ted Meyer, both Chicago Republicans. Leaders of both the Ford and Ronald Reagan campaigns in Illinois believe she leans to Reagan. But she said if Ford announces he will choose someone like John Connally, Howard Baker or William Simon as vice president, she will vote for him.

Daley mum on school cut plan

Mayor Richard J. Daley Monday declined to say whether he approved of Gov. Daniel Walker's offer to cut the financial penalties Chicago public schools must pay for closing early this year in return for a speed-up in state tax collections. Walker last week said he would approve a bill making major changes in the school aid formula if the Illinois General Assembly passes his $95 million tax speed-up plan. "I would say I haven't reviewed all the particulars but anything for the school children in Illinois I am for and anything that would help them I'm for," Daley said.

State jobless chiefs resign

Illinois Bureau of Employment Security Director I. Lawrence Richardson and Robert L. Haughey, unemployment compensation commissioner, resigned Monday, apparently in protest of the settlement of a strike by IBES workers. Donald A. Johnson, director of the Illinois Dept. of Labor, said Richardson and Haughey resigned "over the issue of punishment of striking employes of the bureau." "Neither Richardson nor Haughey could be reached for comment.

MSD gains more bonding power

Gov. Daniel Walker Monday signed legislation allowing the Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District to nearly double its bonded indebtedness without referendum and qualify for additional federal grants. Walker said the bill, sponsored by state Rep. Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, would allow the MSD to receive nearly $225 million in new federal grants. The measure changes the district's maximum non-referendum bonding authority from $380 million to 3 per cent of the district's assessed valuation.

Most of the federal money would go for the MSD's tunnel and reservoir plan to control pollution from waste water in the district's sewer system. The $3 billion system would give the district enough overflow storage capacity to handle large volumes of storm water, thus preventing backups of raw sewage into Lake Michigan and the flooding of basements.

Group prohibited from ERA push

A federal judge in Peoria Monday issued an injunction prohibiting the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year from lobbying for passage of the ERA. U.S. District Court Judge Robert D. Morgan issued the order at the request of attorney J. F. Schlafly, husband of anti-ERA leader Phyllis Schlafly of Alton. The suit was filed on behalf of Patricia Boehnke and Harriet Mulqueeny, leaders in the Illinois Stop ERA movement.

"There was evidence they're doing a lot of things which they may not consider as lobbying but which appeared to be lobbying to the plaintiffs and also to me," Morgan said. "I assume it's either a misunderstanding or a disagreement over what lobbying means." He said his order will prohibit the commission "from expending public funds for lobbying activities."

Reduce school aid: Cronin

State schools Supt. Joseph M. Cronin Monday urged Gov. Daniel Walker to cut $28.5 million from the $1.287 billion school aid appropriation bill passed this session by the Illinois General Assembly. Cronin recommended that Walker, who is expected to take action on the bill this week, pare the appropriation to about $1.258 billion. However, Walker may be forced to make cuts larger than $28.5 million in the education budget because the General Assembly's budget action is still at least $70 million over Walker's budget recommendations. The distributive education bill is the last major appropriation bill Walker has on his desk.

WIU engineer strike ends

About 30 members of Local 8 of the International Operating Engineers ended a 9-day strike against Western Illinois University after approving a new one-year contract with the school Monday. The striking employes, who maintain the air conditioning and hot water facilities at the school, walked off their jobs at 12:01 a.m. Aug. 1. Their contract expired June 30, but it was extended 30 days. The workers wanted a raise of 60 cents per hour, but the university offered only 25 cents. The new contract provides for an immediate 25-cent-an-hour raise.

Butz tells GOP fundraisers

'U.S., China weigh grain sale'

by STEVE BROWN

The United States may make emergency grain sales to aid China's recovery from recent earthquakes, U.S. Agriculture Sec. Earl Butz said Monday.

In a news conference before a $200-a-plate fund-raising dinner in Chicago for Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson, Butz said talks on possible grain sales have begun between U.S. and Chinese officials.

Butz declined to provide any definitive information on the size of the Chinese sale, but said if such an agreement was reached it would not result in any domestic food price increases.

SOME OF OUR PEOPLE have been over there but nothing definite has been worked out," Butz said. He also said any grain sale agreement with China would probably come with a U.S. subsidy rather than a loan.

Butz used the press conference and his dinner speech to praise Thompson and President Ford. He predicted Ford would win the nomination at the Republican National Convention next week. The controversial agricultural secretary, however, refused to criticize Ford's rival, ex-California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"I'm quite fond of Mr. Reagan. He has a great dedication to public service. I have not said a single critical word about him so far, and I will not start here," Butz said. He said he backed Ford because the President has the best chance of winning in November.

BUTZ REFUSED to pick a running mate for the President but called former Treasury Sec. John Connally, who has been mentioned frequently for the spot on the No. 2 GOP ticket, a "very capable and articulate man."

Butz said, however, an assessment would have to be made on how much the news media would continue to report on Connally's role in the milk-fund scandal several years ago before he could be selected as a running mate.

Butz also repeated his call for reform of the federal food stamp program.

"Our goal is to feed the needy, not the greedy," Butz said.

HE SAID ONE-THIRD of the agriculture department budget is spent on welfare-related programs. He criticized Congress for not approving Ford's food stamp reform program, which Butz said would have saved about $1 billion but boosted benefits for the needy by about 30 per cent.

Even though the Thompson dinner was sponsored by the Illinois agribusiness community, the former U.S. attorney managed to work in a criticism of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley in his farm-related business remarks.

"Some time ago the mayor raised the suggestion of a possible transfer tax on commodities transactions. The suggestion did not last long, but if it is raised again, we need a governor who can vigorously oppose that kind of unreasonable taxation without checking with the mayor," Thompson said.

RTA votes to pay employes now

The Regional Transportation Authority board, confident that the courts will uphold the validity of the RTA's budget, Monday voted to pay employes' salaries before a court ruling.

"At the outmost you might have a 2 per cent chance of losing," RTA director Patrick O'Malley said, noting the RTA employes are being forced to take bank loans instead of their salaries.

The RTA has not spent any funds since June 30, when suburban board members blocked passage of the budget in an effort to get Chairman Milton Pikarsky to resign. Although the budget later was approved in a compromise agreement, a court ruling is needed because the budget was approved after the legal deadline.

The Illinois Supreme Court is scheduled to hear the case in a special session Aug. 23.

RTA ATTORNEYS have said that if the courts rule against the budget, the RTA directors will be personally responsible for any monies spent.

Director D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston, however, said he believes "the personal risk is limited and negligible."

"If we do not have enough confidence to believe we will not be held liable, we should not continue to ask our own employes to go to the banks," Baldino said.

Baldino, however, deferred his request to provide emergency grants to transit companies, saying he would like to wait for a court ruling.

DIRECTOR JAMES Kemp of Chicago opposed any expenditures before a court ruling, saying he could not afford the personal liability.

"I do not chose to invite anyone for dinner unless I am sure there is enough food for Mrs. Kemp and myself," he said.

Pastora Cafferty, also of Chicago, voted against the salary expenditure, saying she did not think it was legal.

Ex-Harper worker says she lost job for 'talking'

by DIANE GRANAT

A former Harper College public safety cadet has charged she was fired because she talked to newspaper reporters regarding misuse of the college's public safety department by Harper officials.

College officials said the cadet was dismissed July 30 for failing to report a violation of safety department rules by her supervising officer. The officer who committed the offense, however, was not fired but was suspended from the department for three days.

The cadet, who asked to remain unidentified, said she believes she was dismissed because college officials suspect that she gave information to newspapers concerning misuse of public safety vehicles and personnel by College Pres. Robert Lahti and board members.

THE HERALD reported June 29 accounts by past and present employes of Harper's public safety department that Lahti and some board members requested the use of the safety department, which is responsible for campus security, for errands and personal use.

The safety cadet said Monday she was told the reason for her dismissal was that she had not reported a July 16 incident in which an officer, Charles Erdmann, left his post on campus without receiving authorization or finding a replacement.

The cadet said Erdmann left the campus twice that night to check on his wife at their home after his wife called with complaints that she was being harassed. The cadet said she and Erdmann were the only safety employes on duty at the time. Erdmann was the only one who could go on a car patrol and therefore he left the campus unprotected, she said.

The cadet said the first time Erdmann left, he borrowed her personal car. She said she was not aware that he had left campus a second time, when he apparently used a squad car to go home.

WHEN QUESTIONED about the incident by Safety Chief Gordon Wallace July 19, "I voluntarily told the chief everything I knew," the cadet said.

The cadet said when she asked Wallace why she was fired, "he said he couldn't trust me to report things I had seen."

Safety department regulations require employes to report any misconduct they might observe by fellow employes, the cadet said.

The cadet, who has worked at Harper for two years, said she thinks the only reason she was fired was that she was suspected of having talked to reporters about the misuse of safety vehicles.

"They needed a scapegoat," she said. "They needed somebody to present to the board and to Lahti to say they got rid of the troublemaker."

THE CADET said she has talked to reporters but she was on vacation when the first reports of misuse of the safety department were published. "I didn't have anything to do with going to the paper," she said.

Wallace refused to comment Monday on the cadet's dismissal, referring questions to Robert Hughes, director of physical plant at Harper.

Hughes, who said he reviewed the firing of the cadet, said she was dismissed for "an omission of some facts on a report." He said "a cover-up was done and that was sufficient reason" for her firing.

Judge William Lynch dead at 67

U.S. District Court Judge William J. Lynch died Monday at St. Joseph Hospital, where he had been unconscious since he underwent surgery July 11 for removal of a blood clot in the brain. He was 67.

Lynch, a former law partner of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, was taken to the hospital July 9.

During his 10 years as a judge, Lynch presided over several locally publicized trials, the most recent being that of former Lake County Sheriff Orville S. (Pat) Clavey, convicted on income tax violations, and of former Chicago Police Dept. Commander Mark Thanasouras, convicted in a shakedown conspiracy.

Lynch was a Democratic floor leader in the state Senate, where he served from 1950-1957. He left the legislature in 1957 to serve as general counsel for the Chicago Transit Authority. President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed him to the federal bench in 1966.

Lynch, a bachelor, is survived by two sisters.

Talented Teens To Sing

Two talented groups of young performers will appear at Randhurst this Friday through Sunday, August 13, 14 and 15. THE EDWARDIANS, who have excited audiences coast to coast will perform on the mall at 7:30 p.m. Friday and again on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The SHOW TEENS, who also have traveled the United States extensively, will perform at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. We're sure you will enjoy these spirited presentations of contemporary music.

FALL FASHIONS will be spotlighted this week and during the rest of the month as Randhurst previews Back-To-School fashions. Three shows will be given by Wieboldt's in Wieboldt Court this Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m. and again at 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Now's the time to ask that question. The Secretary of State's Traveling Public Information Center will be stationed in Randhurst August 17 through 22. It will have an experienced driver's license officer on duty who is qualified to answer questions concerning road regulations and road testing procedures. Rules of the Road for automobiles and bicycles will be available. Or drop in and test your eyesight on the center's Vision Machine.

In the meantime, get out your Frisbee or a paper plate and start practicing. Starting at 1:00 p.m. August 21 the First National Bank of Mount Prospect will sponsor a flying saucer Contest in the northwest parking lot. A limited supply of flying saucers will be available. And for the youngsters, there will be the Papai Player's opera "Hansel and Gretel" with afternoon performances August 26 through 29 on the mall.

Frolic in fantasy

Kings Island brings world's treasures to Cincinnati

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The beer gardens of Bavaria, and African safari and the Eiffel Tower can be seen in one day 20 miles north of Cincinnati

Kings Island, a 1,600-acre family entertainment center, contains six theme parks featuring everything from European boulevards to a fantasy land where cartoon characters come to life.

For those who have visited local amusement parks and can't swing a vacation to Florida's Disney World or California's Disneyland, a trip to Kings Island may be one way to appease the kids itching for one last holiday before school bells ring.

Kings Island opens at 10 a.m. daily through Labor Day and weekends through Oct. 31 with the exception of Sept. 18-19 and 25-26 when the park will be closed. Gate prices are $8. Children 2 years old and younger are admitted free. The price is lowered to $5 at 5 p.m. Senior Citizens, 60 and over are admitted for half price.

THERE IS almost nine hours of continuous family entertainment each day in the park. The Bicentennial musical "We the People" is shown seven times a day in the American Heritage Music Hall. Parades are held daily at 2 p.m. on International Street and at 6 p.m. on International Street and the Coney Island Mall. A clown band, barbershop quartet and Roving Dixieland Band entertain throughout the park and fireworks are presented each night.

At 8 p.m. during the regular season and 7 p.m. on weekends the Kings Island/Firestone International Air Show gets off the ground. The show includes the inflation and launch of a giant hot air balloon, a demonstration of precision skydiving, and aerial aerobatics by two World War I biplanes.

The six theme areas in the park begin at the main gate with International Street. The European Boulevard of shops and restaurants reaches almost to the center of the park where the 330-foot replica of the Eiffel Tower stands as a landmark of Kings Island. Twin elevators in the tower transport guests to two observation decks. The 33-story tower is about one third the size of the real structure in Paris.

The focus of International Street is the 320-by 80-foot Royal Fountain — the largest animated fountain in the world. The 106 water jets are capable of shooting 10,000 gallons of water into the air at one time and 336 multicolored underwater lights change regularly in a predetermined program presenting a stunning show at night.

EUROPEAN BUILDINGS on International Street include the Italian building with toys, camera supplies, an old fashioned ice cream parlor and pizza restaurant; Spanish building with a candy factory, clocks, jewelry, chess sets, and glassware; French building with Wicker ware, jewelry and a refreshment stand with hot pretzels and soft drinks; Swiss Building with Kahn's Sausage Haus, a Greek donut shop and mod shop; and German building with Munchen Cafe, Belgian waffle shop, dolls, toys and crystal.

A second theme area is Oktoberfest, Kings Island's version of the famous Bavarian festival. Oktoberfest is complete with a Haufbrauhaus overlooking a lake, oom-pah-pah music and a beer garden offering German-accented foods, dark and domestic beers, and soft drinks. Rides include the Bayern Kurve, Flying Dutchman, Bavarian Beetle, the Rotor, Der Spinnen Keggers, and the aerial cable cars of the Sky Ride.

Lion Country Safari is home for more than 100 wild African animals such as lions, elephants, zebras, hippos, ostrich, rhinos, giraffes and a variety of antelope and Bengal tigers.

Many of the animals roam freely on the 100-acre preserve. Fences separate predator animals from their prey. Air-conditioned monorail trains transport 2,000 guests an hour over about two miles of track. Newborn animals can be viewed at the Nairobi Nursery.

AN EXOTIC bird show is presented daily. Four nearby islands are home for giant land turtles, birds and monkeys while black and white swans glide gracefully on a lake.

Kafe Kilimanjaro, an African-style restaurant, offers an American menu of sandwiches and drinks. Shoppers find a variety of souvenirs and hand crafted items in the Congo Curio.

Cartoon characters like Yogi Bear, Scooby Doo and the Banana Splits come to life in the Happy Land of Hanna-Barbera to greet young visitors in the new colorful chalet.

Rides include The Enchanted Voyage, Marathon Turnpike, Squiddly Diddly, Motor Mouse, Funky Phantom, Winsome Witch's Caldrons, Gulliver's Rub-a-tub, Kikky Kangaroos, and Autocat. The Scooby Doo Roller Coaster has a top speed of 40 m.p.h.

GUESTS CAN feast on hot dogs, chili and pop corn at Gulliver's Galley; Colossal Burgers and fish at Humble Pie; ice cream and cotton candy at Granny's Sweet Treats; or Kings Island koolers, nutty bananas and new rainbow Greek ices at handy carts.

Rivertown is a quaint theme area depicting life in the old Ohio riverboat days. A half mile long Power Valley Nature Trail gives guests an opportunity to stroll through a natural woodland. The South Seas Excursion amphitheater features a lively dolphin show. Two Miami Valley Trains transport guests over a mile-long track through an area infested with animated and live cowboys and Indians. The locomotives are propane gas fired and were designed after the "American General" built in 1855.

Other rides include boats that shoot the rapids, Kenton's Cove Keelboat Canal, Kings Mills Log Flume, Wheel of Fortune, Shawnee Landing War Canoes and antique cars.

Coney Island, a turn-of-the-century theme park, is patterned after a famous old amusement park that was located on the Ohio River east of Cincinnati.

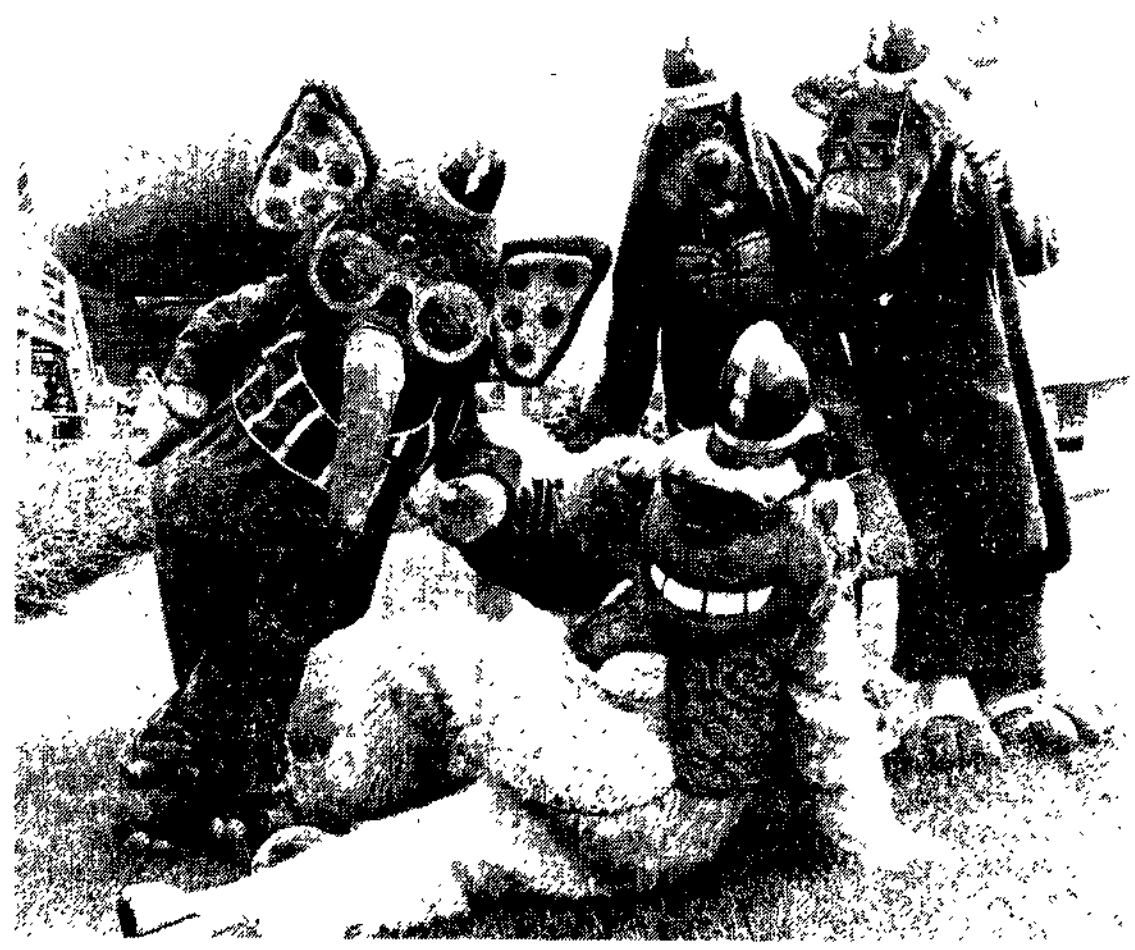
A HIGHLIGHT is the Twin Racer roller coaster where two coaster trains race side-by-side at speeds up to 61 miles per hour. Other rides are Shake, Rattle and Roll; Carousel merry-go-round; Antique cars; Tumblebug; The Monster; Flying Carpets; Halley's Comet; Flying Scooter; The Scramber; Dodgems; Cuddle-Up; and the Zodiac double ferris wheel. Games, arcades and restaurants are also located in Coney Island.

The Kings Island Air Theater, located between Coney Island and the Eiffel Tower, is a 137-foot long structure supported entirely by air pressure. The 1,100-seat theater features an elaborate "Follies" marionette musical. The Las Vegas-type production includes 100 marionettes from three feet high to life size with the voices of entertainers such as Pearl Bailey, Cyd Charisse and Gene Kelly.

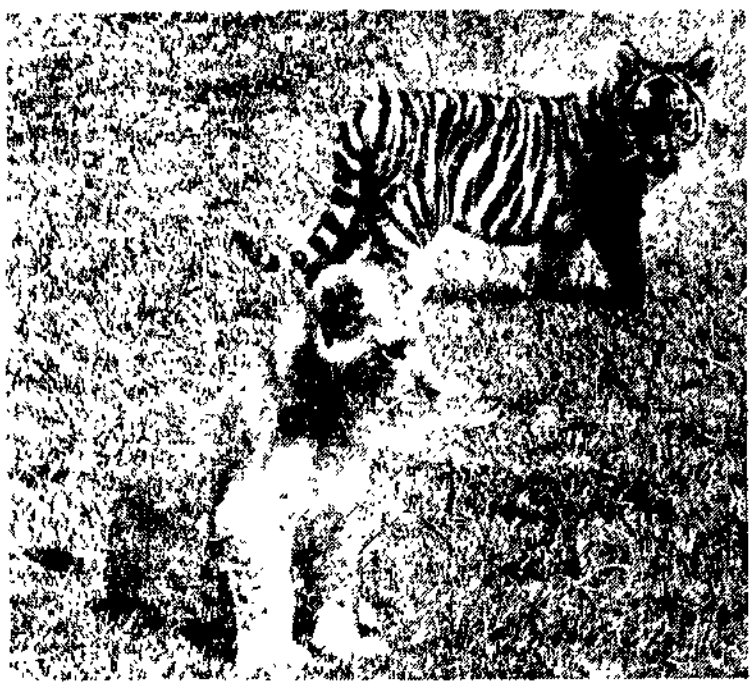
The Kings Island grounds are dotted with three unusual floral displays. A 50-foot bed of American flags from 1776 to 1976 is located near the main gate, an 11-foot liberty bell made with bronze alternantheria plants is stationed by the Carousel and a 20-foot compass in four colors of plants is located near the Antique Car ride.

Kings Island is also home of the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center featuring two championship 18-hole courses. The Kings Island Inn offers guests 200 rooms, tennis courts, outdoor and indoor swimming pools, game rooms, a gift shop and miniature golf. The Kings Island Campground is open all year with 300 sites.

Kings Island is located in Kings Mills, Ohio, 20 miles north of Cincinnati on I-71. Information on Kings Island is available by calling toll-free 800-543-4031.



THE BANANA SPLITS — Bingo, Snorky, Fleegle and Drooper entertain hundreds of youngsters with their daily antics as residents of Kings Island's "Happy Land of Hanna-Barbera."



"SCHNOZ" AND "ROSEBUD," lion and tiger cubs, are the best of friends in the Kings Island Lion Country Safari nursery.

Tips on enjoying theme parks

by MURRAY J. BROWN

Enjoying increasing popularity with American vacationists are the multimillion dollar theme parks offering a wide variety of amusements, entertainment and other attractions for young and old.

Last year, an estimated 75 million men, women and children who spent an average of $10 each visited the 40 major theme parks across the United States. That was 28 million more than those who attended all professional football, basketball and baseball games in 1975.

Industry reports show Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., with more than 12.5 million and Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., with more than 10 million, were the two most popular parks. Incidentally, Disneyland, the first of the theme parks, marked its 21st anniversary in July.

WHAT THE industry figures don't show is how many visitors failed to get the most for their time and money because of poor planning or other reasons.

So here are some tips from Dennis Speigel, general manager of Kings Dominion near Richmond, Va., on how to visit a theme park:

• A single admission charge usually includes rides, shows and other attractions but check travel agencies or write the park. Ask also about family rates or group discounts. Discount coupons are offered sometimes by local merchants.

• Most of the parks are open at night and offer reduced price tickets after 5 p.m. Some, like Kings Dominion and its sister parks Kings Island in Ohio and Carowinds in North Carolina, schedule topflight entertainment during the evening. Some hotels, motels and campgrounds sell combination tickets that are good after 5 p.m. and the following day.

• Wear comfortable clothes and shoes and, if there are school-aged children, expect to do lots of walking. Get a schedule of the day's events, particularly of the live shows, at the entrance. Also ask for a map so you can plan the shortest routes to the various amusement, entertainment and theme areas.

• Eat one big meal and snack the rest of the day — it's easier on the budget and you can rest on benches while munching on a hot dog, hamburger, pizza or taco. Remember most people eat lunch between noon and 1:30 p.m. and dinner between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. Plan meals to avoid the big crush — eat lunch around 2 p.m. and dinner after 7 p.m., for instance.

• Pace yourself. Going back to your room to rest or nap between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. might be a wise idea, especially if you have small kids. Put off the more popular rides and attractions until the early evening hours when other visitors are having dinner or heading home and the long lines will have vanished. It usually will be cooler, too.

• Early starters can avoid waiting crowds and other timeconsuming bottlenecks by moving against the general flow of traffic. Most visitors head from the gate to the nearest attractions; you will probably get to see more if you start your visit at a more distant one.

Speigel said the least crowded day at most parks is Friday — "People are traveling on Friday, going to their destination." Crowds generally are smaller Wednesday and Thursday, too.

The busiest day at the height of the season is usually Saturday, followed by Sunday, he said. And the busiest months are July and August when school is out.

Spiegel suggests that if lodgings are needed, make reservations as early as possible.

Tours feature amusement parks

Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service and Amtrak have launched a tour program to four amusement parks operated by Six Flags.

The four are Atlanta's Six Flags Over Georgia, Dallas' Six Flags Over Texas, St. Louis' Six Flags over Mid-America and Houston's Astroworld.

Tours in each city offer two nights in a choice of at least four hotels or motels. All include a one-day pass (two in St. Louis) to the amusement park with unlimited use on all rides. Price is from $36 per person, double occupancy.

Use of a Hertz rental car for two days is available as part of an alternative package at all four cities with the rate depending on the type of car. Tours using an economy model cost only $13 more than the standard tour.

Extras offered include such specials as admission to the new World of Sid and Marty Krofft in Atlanta, the Lion Country Safari Park at Dallas and Galveston's Sea-Arama Marineland, near Houston.

Amtrak offers rail service to all the cities but Atlanta and may book passengers there via Southern Railway. Amtrak travel agents may arrange both trips and tours. Brochures are available from: Amtrak Travel Center, P.O. Box 262, Addison, Ill. 60101.

Amish fair offers arts, crafts galore

Indiana's largest open-air art festival takes place at Amish Acres outside Nappance Thursday through Sunday.

The Amish heritage and folk art of northern Indiana are celebrated with four days of pot-throwing, silversmithing, weaving and painting. Enhancing the 150-artist marketplace are performances by barbershop quartets, banjo, guitar and dulcimer players, fiddlers and square dancers.

A sports car rally, Punch and Judy shows; rail splitting, corn-grinding demonstrations and buggy rides also are featured.

Admission prices vary.

The way we see it

Do one issue at a time

Arlington Heights Park District officials plan a referendum Sept. 25 asking approval of $1.5 million in tax supported bonds to construct a golf course at the former Nike site, Wilke and Central roads, Arlington Heights.

Thus far, the planning and presentation of the issue have been well conceived, and we are hopeful that park district officials continue their thorough planning of the referendum.

As final plans are under way to present the referendum package to voters, park officials should recall a 1972 referendum which failed because of the way it was composed.

In 1972, the park board decided to place before voters a potpourri of items which included everything from minor park improvements to $1.25 million to build an indoor ice arena. The package was presented as a single question, and voters who had no choice between authorizing a tax increase to improve their neighborhood park and the ice arena, defeated the proposal. It deserved that fate.

The park district officials should have learned a valuable lesson. We urge them not to make the same misjudgment in the wake of statements by Thomas Thornton, park district director, who has said the golf course referendum might be expanded to include an additional $1.25 million for improvements of parks throughout Arlington Heights. A meeting is scheduled Aug. 17 to determine which items will be included in the referendum package.

If the board decides that both the golf course and the neighborhood park improvements are needed, we believe the issues should be separate on the ballot. Because the golf course project represents a major new recreational facility for Arlington Heights and the Northwest suburbs, such a major issue should be carefully analyzed by voters without dozens of fringe questions included in a single package.

Dist. 54 makes a faulty decision

An unnecessary controversy over a lunchroom supervision program has been raging for months in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54.

Parents are questioning the Dist. 54 board's decision to turn over operation of lunchroom supervision to a private parent-run corporation. The result is that families who live within a mile and a half of school will have to pay $35 a child in order for their youngsters to remain at school this year for lunch. The fee does not include food.

Parents will be paying more than it would cost for the district to provide the supervision, and therein lies the controversy.

The parent-run corporation not only has to pay the salaries of supervisors, but insurance, bookkeeping, and administrative costs. The district need only pay a salary to supervisors.

The board washed its hands of the lunch program on the advice of its administrators, who apparently used a dated legal opinion on a related subject to determine it was illegal for the district to charge a fee for lunchroom supervision.

After numerous protests from parents, the board backstepped and asked the administration to get a fresh legal opinion on the question.

It is unfortunate that at this time, a month before school begins, the supervision issue has not been settled. We can understand parents' objections to paying a $35 fee if there is a less expensive solution. And we can only question along with them why the Dist. 54 board agreed to a supervision program before knowing all of the facts.

The Dist. 54 administration also must be faulted for failing to supply the board with full information on various options when it was needed. These months of controversy could have been avoided if the facts were in before the decisions were made.

Arlington library: a great asset

The Arlington Heights Memorial Library has come a long way since the days when it was a homeless collection of books moving from private homes to school hallways.

The library is celebrating its 50th anniversary as a public library this year, and this is a good time to reflect on the many services and opportunities the library provides for residents.

The library has grown since the days when its 3,639 books were housed in a local bank building. And by approving the construction of the present library in 1966 and of an addition which will be under construction later this year, residents of Arlington Heights have shown they appreciate the facility.

The library provides more than a place to check out books. Its well-used meeting rooms house many village clubs and organizations. Its puppet shows and special events attract crowds.

The library is, in short, a major asset to Arlington Heights. We wish it another successful 50 years of growth.

Open Dist. 214 selection process

The High School Dist. 214 board of education should release the names of the persons being considered for the board post vacated by Jack Matthews.

The board has received at least three applications for the job and has said it will withhold the names of the applicants until a preliminary review is completed. The board plans to appoint Matthews' replacement Aug. 23.

The public should be involved in the selection of the replacement for Matthews who will serve at least through next April's board election and will certainly have an advantage over other candidates in that election.

Dist. 214 board Pres. Donald Hoeck has said the board is not releasing the names because it feels the appointment is a "personal matter" which does not by law have to be made public.

While Hoeck may be technically correct, there is a key difference between selecting a new board member and hiring school district employes. When a board member must be replaced, the public clearly has a right to participate in the process, to know who is being considered and to advise board members of their preferences concerning the appointment.

The Dist. 214 board has for years enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most competent and responsive boards in the area. An open process for selecting Matthew's replacement will go far toward enhancing that reputation.

Letter about golf course was wrong, reader asks where was author earlier

Mr. Gareth L. Golay's letter to the Fence Post published Aug. 5, 1976, gives the impression the proposed golf course at the old Nike site in Arlington Heights will aggravate the village water problem.

I only wish Mr. Golay would have taken the time and effort to inform himself of a project which is across the street from his home.

The golf course will be covered with lush green lawns during the entire summer without the use of the village water system.

Numerous public meetings and newspaper articles have indicated the golf course is also a flood control project. The site will contain nearly 20 man-made lakes (water hazards) to hold flood water from the southwest portion of Arlington Heights, an area which has had extensive flood damage in the past. The flood water in the lakes will be used to sprinkle the golf course and the excess will flow into Salt Creek.

The Flood Control Committee worked three years to accomplish a goal requesting all citizens to participate in their decision.

Many village residents did participate in the planning and design of this lasting Bicentennial project.

I wonder where Mr. Gareth L. Golay has been for the last three years?

Post office slogan should change

The Mount Prospect Herald carried a front page account of the move of the Post Office to their new quarters, picturing the U.S. Postal Service Emblem with their legend: "Service is our last name but our first priority."

A more appropriate caption would be "Service is our last name and also our last priority."

It never fails that whenever we go on vacation our mail gets fouled up one way or another. This year was a new one.

We subscribe to a magazine which comes out weekly. The Post Office took it upon themselves to send in a change of address so that the magazine now goes to our vacation address. To date we have missed five copies. All we had requested was that our first class mail be forwarded for the first two weeks in June.

All they say is "We're sorry."

Help sought from residents

"A door does not close, unless another is opened to you," quotes my mother. While Betty Crocker coupons are out, National food tapes are in, in assisting the mentally retarded at Dixon State School, to obtain much needed learning and recreational equipment. For every $300.00 worth of tapes, any store, any date, National will give us $1.00.

When I wrote Mr. Edelman at Dixon, saying we once again can help the forgotten children's fund, and how could this money best benefit the residents, he referred my letter to the Chaplins. They really could use simple musical instruments, such as tamborines, bells, etc. for severely retarded tots. (Maybe ear plugs later . . . ?) I told him we should start low, say $200.00. I received an estimate for $201.80, so he really juggled around, not to go over my figure of $200.00.

Already the response from the women's club of St. Thomas of Villanova has been overwhelming. Now I'd like to ask everyone who would like to help, to send the tapes to me. If the response is anywhere near the half million Betty Crocker coupons we saved, we could continue to make life a little brighter for these special children.

Think I'm finished? Not only are children orphaned, or abandoned, but also dogs & cats. We can help them too, by saving bonus coupons, and Purina weight circles found on dog and cat food bags. Send them to me, and they in turn can be used to purchase dog and cat food for non-profit havens for unwanted and elderly animals, that can be retired to live out their lives in peace.

Senate bill flirts with energy snarl

by MAURICE F. GRANVILLE

An effort is being made to create a major battle in Congress to restructure the oil industry. If successful, this could lead only to higher prices for consumers and increase the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

The Senate Judiciary Committee recently voted to send a so-called "divestiture bill" — formally known as the Petroleum Industry Competition Act — to the 100 members of the Senate for debate. The bill is designed to break up 18 large oil companies into separate production, transportation and refining — marketing entities.

It is ironic that legislation in congress allegedly designed to cope with the energy situation threatens consumer interests with the possibility of throwing the petroleum industry into chaos.

Proponents of divestiture claim that it would create more companies in the marketplace and, in turn, more competition. Obviously they do not understand the intense competition that already exists at each functional level of the oil business.

Today there are more than 10,000 separate and independent companies exploring for and producing crude oil and natural gas. No one company accounts for more than 10 per cent of U.S. production.

There are about 100 separate pipeline companies in the United States engaged in the interstate movement of crude oil and products.

There are 131 separate companies engaged in petroleum refining. No one company accounts for more than 9 per cent of U.S. refining capacity.

There are over 15,000 wholesale oil distributors in the United States and more than 300,000 gasoline retailers, 95 per cent of whom are independent businessmen. No one company supplies more than about 8 per cent of U.S. gasoline demand.

By any measure, the petroleum industry is highly competitive. The premise that breaking up some 18 oil companies could increase that competition is false. Breaking up these companies would not create a single new company at any particular level of competition. There would still be the same number of producing companies. The same number of transportation companies, and the same number of refining and marketing companies.

In the average U.S. manufacturing industry, the top four companies account for about 40 per cent of the sales volume. In contrast, the four top companies in the petroleum industry command only 26 to 30 per cent of the total volume in any phase of the business. Actually, more than 25 major industries in America have higher ratios of concentration than petroleum.

The evidence clearly shows that the petroleum industry is highly competitive, the best guarantee of reasonable prices to consumers. During the 25 years before the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) took control of world oil prices in 1973, the U.S. Consumer Price Index went up some 85 per cent, while the U.S. retail price of gasoline went up only 38 per cent. This comparison provides a good example of the forces of competition at work.

The proponents of divestiture have not shown that such drastic and irreversible legislation could benefit the American people in any way. If there is nothing to be gained, isn't it time to ask what America could lose?

Without question, divestiture would disrupt the petroleum industry and embroil it in years of litigation. During this period it would be all but impossible for many parts of the industry to attract adequate investment capital. Oil company efforts to develop new domestic energy supplies would be crippled and our nation's overdependence on foreign oil increased and prolonged.

Breaking up the American oil companies could only serve to intensify the stranglehold OPEC has on the world oil market and give it a free hand to set higher prices. Stripped of demagogy, that will be the disastrous consequence of legislation to dismember the petroleum industry.

Firms find life-saving skills pay off

by KURT BAER

High finance and high blood pressure often go hand-in-hand in the business world.

To aid employes during the first critical minutes following a heart attack or other trauma, businesses are forming their own paramedic-style emergency medical teams.

"It's not our intent to replace the company nurse or doctor," says David Grupp, who organized an emergency medical squad of fellow employes at the Kemper Insurance Co., Long Grove, where 1,800 workers are employed.

Neither are they substitutes for fire department paramedics who ultimately care for and transport the patient to a hospital.

BUT EMPLOYE-STAFFED medical teams can mean the difference between life and death for their fellow workers before the paramedic ambulance arrives on the scene.

"People can be prepared to handle emergencies when they come up; be ready if the doctor or nurse is not available; to maintain breathing and cardiac rhythm in the time you're waiting for paramedics to arrive," Grupp says. The group has been called out four times in the past nine months.

Grupp, a Buffalo Grove resident, is a paramedic and volunteer chief of the Long Grove Fire Dept. in addition to his job in the loss control division at Kemper.

The paramedic-style emergency medicine of today bears virtually no resemblance to old-fashioned first aid, says Dr. Stanley M. Zydlo, director of emergency medicine at Northwest Community Hospital.

Drugs that will strengthen a failing heartbeat, portable resuscitators, defibrilators and other hardware are part of the difference. But so is the training each person qualified in emergency medicine receives.

CARDIOPULMONARY resuscitation is a key part of the training. CPR is a simple, three-step procedure for reviving a person whose heartbeat and breathing have stopped.

At Chemplex in Rolling Meadows, CRP training was considered important enough that time was scheduled during regular work shifts recently so that every employe could learn the life-saving technique, says John Benham, analytical chemist and head of Chemplex's 12-member emergency squad.

Nurses from Northwest Community Hospital presented two days of CPR classes for the company's 150 employes in Rolling Meadows.

At Western Electric in Rolling Meadows, CPR films were shown to employes who make up what the company calls its "cot crews."

Cot crew members work at various jobs throughout the Western Electric building and are trained to react as a team in case of a medical crisis.

An emergency medical squad can function as a "stop gap between the emergency and the time the paramedics arrive," Benham says.

THREE OF THE 12 members on the Chemplex emergency team already are Red Cross first-aid instructors and there are plans to train five or six employes to be CPR instructors, Benham says.

At Kemper, emergency medical team members also have an outside interest in the business of saving lives.

"Our program has been strengthened by the fact that a number of our people are safety and fire professionals," Grupp says.

One of the most sophisticated medical programs in the country is set up at Honeywell, Inc., Arlington Heights.

Honeywell uses a "life pack" that sends an electronic picture of a stricken employe's heartbeat over a special telephone line directly to the emergency room at Northwest Community Hospital.

AT THE HOSPITAL, doctors evaluate the patient's condition and can order the use of emergency drugs.

Honeywell's nurse, Toni Paul, received special training from Dr. Zydlo in the use of the life pack which is unique in the Northwest suburban area.

The life pack installation cost the company $3,000 to $4,000. Douglas McArthur, Honeywell personnel manager, says it is well worth the expense.

"All you have to do is save somebody's life — and you can't put a price on that — but it certainly is worth $4,000," he says.

The system got "a very positive response" from Honeywell employes, many of whom are older, McArthur says. "In the few cases where we have had to use it, it has provided some comfort to the individual who thought he had suffered a heart attack."

LIKE OTHER emergency medical procedures in business and industry, Honeywell's life pack is to help during the "five to six minutes before the paramedic ambulance arrives," McArthur says.

It is not only large companies that need employes trained in emergency medicine, says Dr. Zydlo. "People in small companies drop dead just like they do in big ones," he says.

Also, some companies balk at the cost of life-saving equipment. But the worth of an employe emergency program is easy to summarize, Zydlo says. "Too many times, by the time the fire department paramedics get to the scene, go through a building that can be blocks long to get to the patient, it's just about time to pronounce the guy dead."

"An employe or nurse who's got the guts can act as my agent if they get some training. What good is it to get a guy to the hospital if he dies waiting for the paramedics to get to him."

Dow falls 2.54 pts.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The threat of Hurricane Belle striking the New York City area forced the stock market to close an hour early Monday with prices finishing lower in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, an 0.68-point loser Friday, fell another 2.54 points to 983.46 before the market closed at 3 p.m. EDT. The blue-chip average traded with a 2.31-point handicap from the outset because nine of its 30 components were trading ex-dividend.

The NYSE common stock index shed 0.15 to 55.31 and the average price of a common share decreased by 10 cents. Declines topped advances, 735 to 550, among the 1,808 issues crossing the tape. The 523 unchanged issues reflected investor uncertainty.

STANDARD & POOR'S new 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, lost 0.30 to 103.49.

Volume for the five-hour day totaled 11,700,000 shares, compared with 13,930,000 traded Friday. Even though the trading time was cut an hour, Monday's turnover still was higher than the 10,300,820 shares traded Jan. 2, the slowest day of the year. The NYSE was scheduled to reopen at 10 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

A number of observers said Wall Street has been waiting for the Republican convention to get underway next week in Kansas City, where the GOP will nhoose either President Ford or Ronald Reagan as its candidate. This will clear up one political uncertainty affecting the market.

Task unit to probe broker rig charges

Samuel K. Skinner, U.S. district attorney, said Monday he has named a task force to investigate allegations of market rigging by brokers on the Chicago Board of Trade and Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Skinner said any frauds could have "multimillion dollar ramifications" in commodity prices and any fixing of trade deals could have affected prices on the open market. The extent of any alleged fraud is not known at this time, Skinner said, and his office does not believe the exchanges themselves are involved.

The Chicago Board of Trade declined comment. At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, a spokesman said, "We have always vigorously enforced our rules, and cooperate with all investigative proceedings." He concluded by saying that if any wrongdoers were discovered, they would be punished. Skinner said individual brokers and some firms might have been involved in prefixing trade for tax or other purposes.

Gas rate hike plan blocked

A federal appeals court Monday blocked a big natural gas rate increase authorized by the Federal Power Commission unless provisions are made for refunds if the increase is later rescinded. In a unanimous decision, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals here issued a limited injunction against the new rates — nearly triple the current charges for gas at the wellhead and estimated to cost consumers $1.5 billion the first year. The appeals court judges heard arguments on the matter last Thursday after a two-judge federal court temporarily blocked the increase and the FPC appealed.

In its opinion, the appeals panel held that gas producers could file new rates before the FPC reaches a final determination on the matter, but blocked any actual increases unless provisions are made for possible refunds. "There is an imperative need for a refund obligation as to the producer charges for the period between July 17 and the commission's final action on applications for rehearing," the appeals court said.

Walker OKs mortgage law

Gov. Daniel Walker Monday announced he has approved legislation which ties the ceiling on home mortgage interest rates to long-term government bond yields. The measure (SB719), sponsored by Sen. Sam Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville, passed both houses of the legislature by large margins and went to the governor for his action last month. The measure replaces the present law, which sets the interest rate ceiling at an inflexible 9½ per cent. If the legislature had not taken action to replace or renew the law, the ceiling would have reverted to 8 per cent.

The legislation provides that the mortgage interest ceiling will be set at 2½ per cent above the current yield on long-term government bonds. The yields are updated every month. Thus, if the federal government's index during a month shows that the yield on long-term bonds is 6-3/4 per cent, then the interest rate limit would be 9¼.

Miners moving back to work

A back-to-wrok movement at coal mines in Illinois began Monday at the urging of Illinois officials of the United Mine Workers but pickets kept many mines shut down, a preliminary survey showed. Thomas Shoemake, Herrin, a UMW subdistrict board member, said the UMW in Illinois has about 13,500 members at mines and mine construction and estimated that more than 6,700 were still off the job. Otis J. Gibson, president of the Illinois Coal Operators Association, said the association was still checking all companies in its count but that it was not complete. He had estimated that some 11,500 were off the job last Friday.

Teamsters file insurance suit

The Teamsters Union's Central States Pension Fund filed an $18 million damage suit Monday charging that an Oklahoma insurance firm defaulted on more than $8 million in loans. It was the second suit filed in less than a week by the $1.4 billion pension fund, largest in the nation. The fund is being investigated by the Internal Revenue Service and other federal authorities. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, named as defendants United Founder Life Insurance Co.; its subsidiary, the Reis Corp., and Jack T. Massey, Bernard G. Ille and Gerald Barton, executives of both companies.

Seafood shop coming to area

Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppe, a restaurant chain headquartered in Lexington, Ky., announced plans to open a shop in the Arlington Plaza, Arlington Heights. The firm is a subsidiary of Jerricho, Inc. The announcement was made jointly by Ernie Renaud, president of Long John Silver's, and Jay Wiston, developer and owner of Arlen Shopping Centers Company's Re-leasing Division. A variety of seafood and other foods will be served at the new restaurant located at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Rand roads.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

It's not hard to cure common skin cancers

I am very concerned about skin cancer. I know there must be several people who have it and think it's just a spot that will go away. That's what I thought about the spot on my back. It turned pink and I decided to go into the doctor's office and have it checked after ignoring it for a while.

He cut it out and sent it to the lab. It was skin cancer. The doctor said he got it all out and not to worry. I hope I can take his word for it. I was told the sun rays cause skin cancer. Please tell us more about it and also about moles.

Skin cancer is the most common of all cancers. Fortunately, with the exception of cancer from moles (malignant melanomas) they usually do not spread to other parts of the body. They only cause local tissue destruction and can be cured simply by cutting out all of the area involved. That can become a fair-sized area, though, if the cancer is neglected.

Those little scab-like formations on the face and back of the hands are often actinic keratosis, the name for the premalignant spots that develop from exposure to the sun. They should be seen by a doctor and removed. Sun rays are radiation. The ultraviolet radiation from the sun causes these spots and is the major factor in causing skin cancer. I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Tex., 78292.

I have rheumatoid arthritis. I would like your advice as to which part of the United States would be most beneficial to the arthritis. I live on the seacoast of North Carolina now.

The most important consideration is not climate but the availability of good medical help and that usually means the availability of a rheumatology clinic or at least a specialist in rheumatology. Friends and relatives who will help and good medical help comes first.

If all other factors are equal I would vote for a warm, dry climate, although the evidence that such a climate is really beneficial for arthritis is meager at best.

I would like to know if it is considered common knowledge that when going into the hospital the operating doctor should be told personally by the patient about any medication being taken by him? Or should it be enough to tell the nurse who takes the medicine away what it is for and assume that the doctor will see the notation on the chart and continue issuing it?

Where human beings are concerned never assume anything. You can't even be sure that the information will get on the chart in time for the doctor to see it. My advice to all patients is to give the doctor any information they want him to know if they want to be sure he gets it.

If you are taking a lot of medicines write a list of them and be sure the doctor gets the list when he takes your history or examines you.

Many remedies remove body odors from clothes

We're into another wave of questions on a single subject — this time perspiration odor in clothing. Simple laundering fails to remove the odor. The files show many variants on a pattern. One remedy appears to be mouthwash — sponging the offending areas with it and then laundering. Another calls for disinfectant. Other pre-laundry treatments include spraying with a solution of three-fourths cup of hot water with one-fourth cup of household ammonia; rubbing the areas with germicidal soap; soaking in a lukewarm water solution with a handful of borax thrown in; spraying with pre-wash remover, soaking in a solution of three tablespoons salt to a quart of water, letting stand overnight, rinsing next day and treating with a liquid detergent. Vinegar rinses have been used with success in some instances. In short, a lot of things work and you have to try some of these until you arrive at the one that works best for you.

Dear Dorothy: I usually skin chicken for frying but leave it when it is baked. The chicken browns but the skin isn't crisp. Any way to crisp it? — Christine Everhart.

Brushing it with fat before roasting — then turning up the heat the last 15 or 20 minutes — ought to give you a nice crackling skin.

Dear Dorothy: Been wanting to write to you for some time to tell you about a trick I adapted from your column. We have a window that looks out onto a walk. We never knew if we were being observed. I made the suggested solution of four tablespoons of epsom salts with one cup of beer and dabbed it on the window with a washcloth. It is completely opaque and crystals form a lovely pattern. — Susan Gold.

Weddings

Penny McDaniel — Scott Lucier

A couple who grew up in Palatine, Penny Lane McDaniel and Scott Michael Lucier, were married July 10 at 5 p.m. in the local Christ Lutheran Church.

Both went to Fremd High School. Penny is now working in Itasca for J. S. Coffman & Son and Scott for United Card Co. in Rolling Meadows.

Their parents are the Wayne McDaniels and the Richard L. Luciers, all of Palatine.

For the double ring rites, Penny wore a white sheer gown trimmed in lace that was studded with iridescent beading and with it a lace-edged veil attached to a headband. Her bouquet was composed of white roses and carnations.

LAURA GOTT EGAN, Arlington Heights, was her maid of honor, wearing a sky blue gown and carrying a bouquet of mixed blooms. The bridesmaid, Patty McDaniel, 12-year-old sister of the bride, wore spring green in the same style and carried a mixed bouquet.

Richard Lucier served as his brother's best man, with William Oakley, Schaumburg, as groomsman.

A buffet dinner at Farman's Hotel, Lake Zurich, followed the ceremony. After a short honeymoon at the Wagon Wheel in Rockton, the newlyweds settled in an apartment in Palatine.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott M. Lucier

Kathryn Sue Laier — Alan Olson

An Arlington Heights couple, Kathryn Sue Laier and Alan Olson, became Mr. and Mrs. after repeating marriage vows July 10 in a double ring service in First United Methodist Church of Arlington Heights.

Kathy and Alan first dated during their senior year at Hersey High. After graduation in '72, Kathy went on to study at Illinois State University and Alan at Harper. They resumed dating before Kathy was graduated from Illinois State last May where she received a double major in home ec and French education in a program which included study in France. In September Kathy will be teaching at Maine South, Park Ridge; Alan is with Klein Tool in Skokie.

Kathy, daughter of the Clifford R. Laiers, Arlington Heights, and Alan, son of the George Olsons, Arlington Heights, were married in a 4:30 p.m. candlelight, double ring service with Kathy wearing a lace-trimmed, white chiffon gown designed and sewn by herself. She also made her veil which was held by a Juliet cap of lace and seed pearls, and she carried a nosegay of white and pink roses, white carnations and stephanotis with baby's breath.

JANET LAIER, Madison, Wis., was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Kathy Aemisegger, Libertyville, and Sheree Gilbert, Arlington Heights. Their homesewn gowns were of blue flowered chiffon with matching capelets, and they carried nosegays of white carnations, pink roses and baby's breath. They also wore roses and carnations in their hair.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Olson

Becky Miller, 5, Arlington Heights, was flower girl wearing a white dotted Swiss gown over blue, and she carried a white basket of white carnations and pink roses. Five-year-old Eric Olson, brother of the groom, was ring bearer, and the groom's father was best man. The bride's brother, Philip, and Michael Motta, Chicago, were ushers.

A dinner reception for 90 guests was held at Howard Johnson's in Palatine. The newlyweds went on a camping honeymoon and are now residing in Arlington Heights.

Zettek recieves honors for play in all-star game

by ART MUGALIAN

The lazy dog days of early August weren't so dull for Scott Zettek, Jim Popp and Scott Scholz.

The three talented prep football players were representing the Herald area in the second annual Illinois High School All-Star Game at Illinois State University Saturday night, but the week prior to the game was every bit what they bargained for.

Practice was a four-hours-a-day, double-session proposition.

"We spent a whole week just preparing for the game," said Scholz, a Schaumburg High School all-stater who played for the winning East team

"Most of us were just trying to get back in shape again, not that anybody was really out of shape. But a lot of us were clumsy, falling over tackling dummies. I was really sore after the first three days."

Zettek, St. Viator's Mr. Everything, was voted most valuable defensive player in the game, even though his West team lost 28-18

"We were hitting the first day out," said Zettek, who made nearly 20 tackles for the West. "We were hitting every day of the week except Friday. And the weather was so hot."

Zettek and Scholz weren't complaining about the workout, especially since both of them will be getting plenty of the same when they report to college later this month. Each received a full grid scholarship.

Scholz, a three-sport star at Schaumburg, heads for Illinois, and Zettek will go to Notre Dame.

Popp, a running back who set all kinds of records at Palatine High School last season, will be a walk-on at Northern Michigan.

Popp didn't get much of a chance to show the form he displayed last fall when he rushed for 1,214 yards and scored 18 touchdowns. He performed on the specialty teams Saturday and was used largely as a blocking back. The 5-foot-9, 170-pounder carried the ball only twice.

It was a different experience for Scholz, too, whose specialty for Schaumburg's two-time Mid-Suburban champions was middle linebacker.

"They had me at defensive end," Scholz said with a chuckle. "They didn't have any defensive ends, so me and this other linebacker had to play there."

The 6-2, 195-pounder, whose dad, Gary, is an assistant football coach at Schaumburg, made a couple of nice plays at the unfamiliar position.

The all-star affair, sponsored by the Illinois Football Coaches Assn. and the Shriners, brought together the state's best seniors from all five classes.

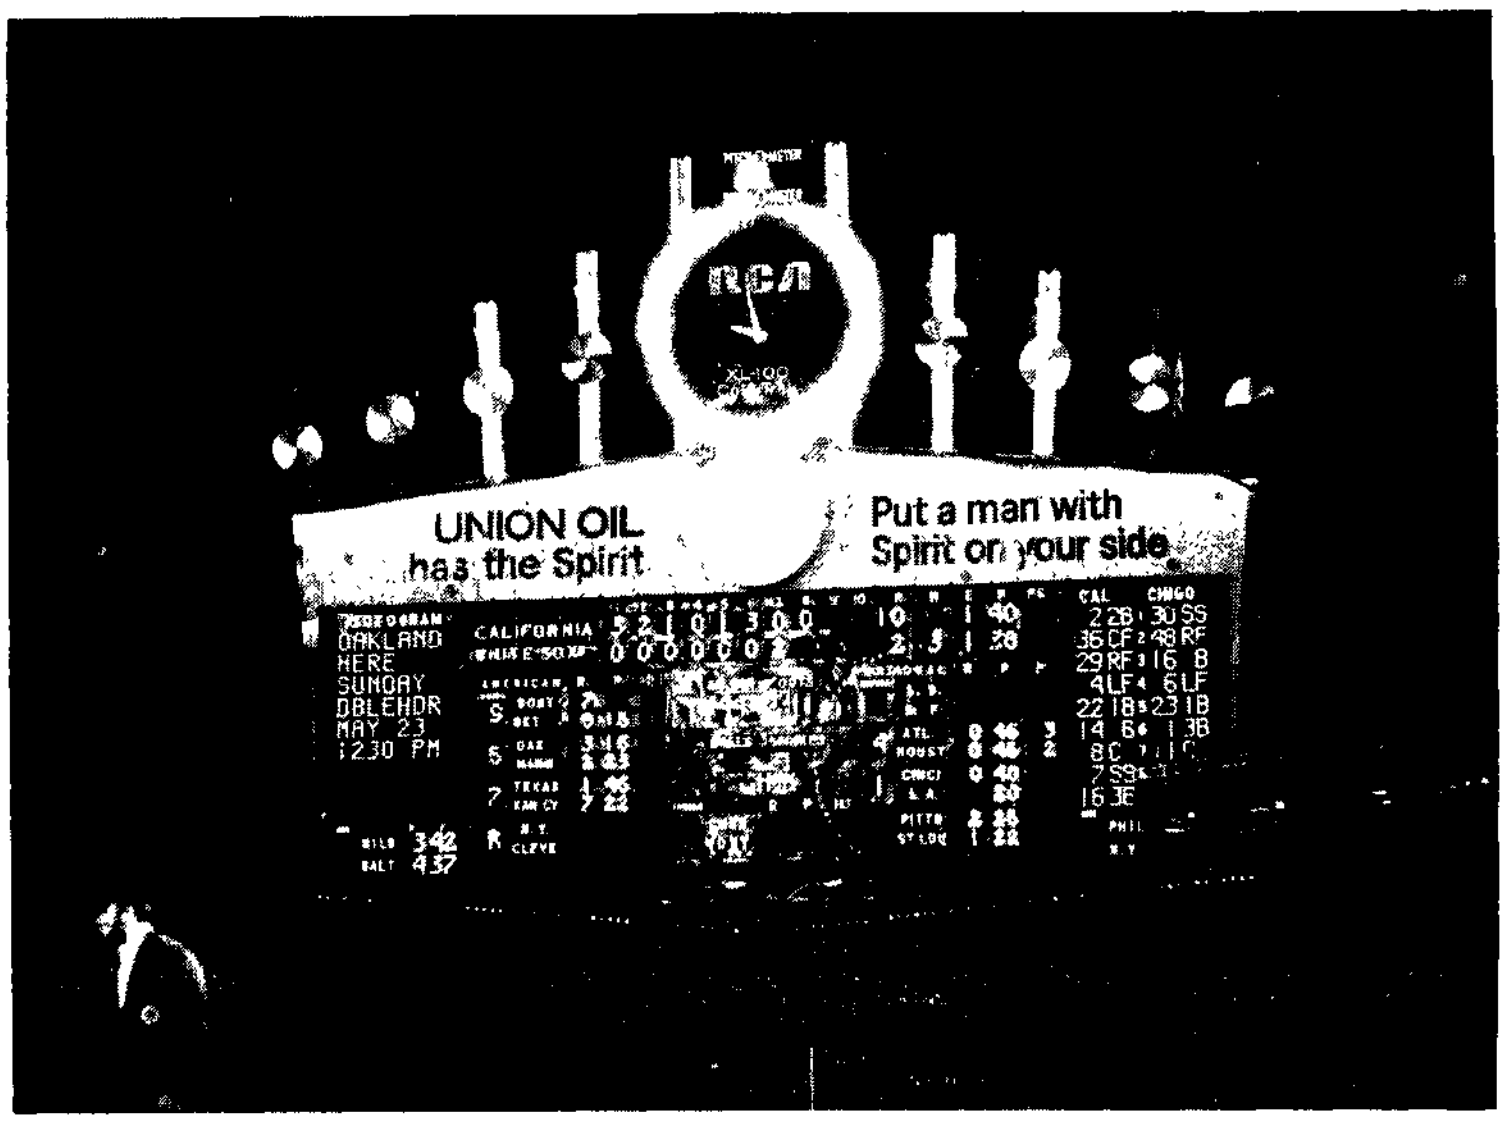
"I think everybody had a good time meeting players from all parts of Illinois," said Zettek, who was also a state-ranked wrestler at St. Viator. "You really can't quite appreciate it living in Chicago, but southern Illinois is a different experience. The kids are all from farms and small towns."

The game itself was a schizophrenic delight. The West led 18-3 at halftime, but the East scored five times in the final two quarters to hail it out.

"We were beating the hell out of them," Zettek claimed. "We were in control and then we just took a nosedive."

Zettek played most of the first half, then sat out a good portion of the rest of the contest as both teams shuttled in fresh players.

"All week, all we did was play football, eat, and sleep," said Scholz. "There wasn't much time to do anything else."



THE MONSTER, a nickname tagged to the exploding scoreboard at Comiskey Park, has stood in centerfield for some 30 years. The scoreboard was enlarged to add the Sox-O-Gram, lineup listings, and the lights to celebrate a home run, in 1961.

'The Monster' is a fake

Childhood dream shattered

Bob Gallas

Staff Sportswriter

Tell me the Lone Ranger wears colored underwear.

I can even bear the thought of Lassie actually being a boy and that Harpo Marx really could talk.

But, please, don't say "The Monster" isn't real.

"The Monster," rather the exploding scoreboard at Comiskey Park, has always held a special spot in my life. "Hold your ears when the Sox hit a home run. That makes 'The Monster' go wild," my father would tell me, and I believed him."

I believed him for a long time.

Even as a teen, it was often easy to conjure up a mental picture of just what went on inside the massive 10-story structure when it popped its cork. Visions of men frantically throwing switches and sending aerial bombs aloft from deep within the structure were always enjoyable.

But now the last bastion of the childhood dreams has been snatched from me.

"The Monster" is a fake.

"Oh no, we don't shoot any fireworks off," said the man as the reporter poked his head in the trapdoor that led into the insides of "The Monster." "A fireworks company shoots them off from the parking lot in back," he said.

Panic started to set in. Childhood fantasies don't tear down easy.

"Where are the switches that set off the scoreboard," I asked, hoping to see a panel that would at least rival the Wizard of Oz setup.

"Just one switch, that's all it takes," said the man. "Well, actually two. They added one this year," the man said, perhaps because he'd noticed how far my face had dropped.

If "The Monster" were real, you'd have to say it was a very sloppy and kind of tired monster. The heart of the scoreboard dates back some 30 years, and time has taken its toll.

The switches that control the informative parts of the board such as balls, strikes, scores of other games and the like, are always sticking or failing to catch.

That necessitates a large supply of pencils, to be used for jamming the switches in place.

The wind whistles through the opeings in the large structure, a bone chilling wind in the early days of spring, but not very relieving in the heat of summer.

Only three men work the giant board, which features flashing lights, sound effects, and fireworks shooting high into the air every time a member of the White Sox pops a home run.

One member of the three-man board crew posts the scores of other games, information he gets constantly from a Western Union ticker machine.

Another controls the scoreboard signs that list balls, strikes and outs. He gets the information from "Pike" or Joe, who sit behind the pressbox behind home plate and relay the umpire's calls via a telephone hookup.

Still another is around to throw the two switches that set "The Monster" in motion, or perhaps change one of the cassette tapes that provide the soundtrack that can range from the Halleujahs of Handel's "Messiah" to a locomotive bearing down on a crossing.

The "Sox-O-Gram," a message board used to be controlled from the inside of the board, but even that duty has been recently snatched from "The Monster."

A computerized tape, fed into a typewriter, now automatically writes out the messages that appear on the board. The computer can put up messages at three times the rate of the old way.

All three men who operate the board are employes of a Chicago firm that is responsible for its maintenance. All three are electricians, so they also keep the structure in as good a working order as possible for something that's 30 years old.

"The Monster," the exploding part of the board, was added in 1961 by Bill Veeck, who owned the Sox then and came back to buy the team again last year. It was first in its time, but since has been copied by several other teams.

Closing the trap door and clambering down the ladder that leads from the scoreboard, I wondered what to say when, sooner or later, my young son would ask me about the scoreboard. I think I know.

"Hold your ears when the Sox hit a home run. That makes 'The Monster' go wild . . ."

He'll believe me.

Candelaria no-hits L.A. for Pirates

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh's 6-foot-7 John Candelaria pitched a no-hitter Monday night, overwhelming the Los Angeles Dodgers with his lightning fast ball and giving the Pirates a 2-0 victory on "Candy Night" celebrated by the give-away of 10,000 candy bars.

The closest the Dodgers came to getting a hit was in the first inning when Ted Sizemore looped a soft fly ball down the right field line that Pirates' outfielder Dave Parker caught knee-high on the dead run.

It was the first no-hitter ever thrown by a Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher and the third in the major leagues this season, following Houston's Larry Dierker and the Chicago White Sox' John "Blue Moon" Odom and Francisco Barrios.

Candelaria, 23, in his second year with the Pirates, survived a bases-loaded situation in the third inning. With one out, Steve Yeager drew a walk, but was forced at second on a grounder by Rau. Dave Lopes and Ted Sizemore then reached base on errors by Frank Taveras and Robinson, but Candelaria got Russell on a forceout to end the threat.

Candelaria then retired 18 batters in a row to end the game.

Former St. Louis Cardinals' star Bob Gibson, the only pitcher ever to throw a no-hitter in Pittsburgh before Monday night, was a member of the national television broadcast team covering the game.

INSIDE THE MONSTER, Chick, left, takes a break from posting the scores of other major league games while Jack, who keeps track of the balls and strikes posted on the board, gets a look at what's going on with the help of his binoculars.

Six baseball immortals inducted into Hall of Fame

by FRED DOWN

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon threw verbal curves and fastballs Monday with the same dexterity they displayed during their brilliant careers when they and four other baseball immortals were formally inducted into the Hall of Fame..

Also inducted into the shrine in ceremonies presided over by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn were Fred Lindstrom, a star infielder for the New York Giants in the 1920's; former American League Umpire Cal Hubbard; Roger Connor, the game's first home run king, and Oscar Charleston, who spent his entire career in the shadowland of the old Negro league.

An all night rain and the threat of further downpours forced the ceremonies to be held in a hotel ballroom instead of on the ground of the Hall of Fame, but couldn't dampen the happiness and pride of the four inductees who were present and their families. Connor and Charleston are deceased.

"I showed up a lot — that's one of the reasons I'm here," said Roberts whose 286 victories during a career spent mostly with the Philadelphia Phillies make him the fourth highest winner in the post - 1920 era. "The Hall of Fame people have been wonderful to me and in fact denied me only one request.

"They didn't think it would be appropriate to introduce all the guys who hit homers off me," he quipped, referring to the fact he gave up a record 502 homers during his career.

Then, with a nod toward the other Hall of Famers, he added: "When I was elected, I wondered if I really belonged. After looking at these beat up guys, I know I belong."

Lemon, who compiled a 207-123 record in 11 seasons with the Cleveland Indians, introduced his 83-year-old mother who made the trip from California and tried to express his feelings with an old saying.

"I've run with the elephants, I've heard the owl and I've flown with the eagles," he said. "I told my wife last night that after this it's all down hill for me. But of course she knew that years ago.

"I had my bad days on the field," he added. "But I didn't take them home with me. I left them in a bar along the way."

Lemon also described how as a youngster he once hit his mother with a pitch as he attempted to demonstrate his curve ball.

"Early Wynn always said he would stick one in his mother's ear to prevent a base hit," he said, referring to a former teammate and fellow Hall of Famer. "But I'm the only one who did stick one in my mother's ear."

Lindstrom, 70, described his election as "the handy work of the Supreme Being and the greatest thing that ever happened to me." while Hubbard, 75, said he was "very proud, very humble and very happy" and added, "I had my bad days, but every day I walked on the ball field I did my level best."

Hubbard, who also is a member of the Football Hall of Fame, is the first man ever to be elected to both shrines.

Connors' plaque was accepted by his grandson, Francis Caldwell, who said it was "a great honor to receive this plaque on behalf of the Caldwell family." Charleston's plaque was accepted by his sister, Mrs. Katherine Horsely, who said "for 22 years I hoped and prayed this day would come."

Big Ten to conduct OSU football probe

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said Monday his office will investigate allegations of violations of conference regulations by Ohio State University

Duke's announcement came from his office here after the Michigan State University student newspaper The State News, quoted Duke as saying he will look into allegations against Ohio State University, last season's conference champion

Duke's statement from Chicago said.

"Whenever reports of allegations are made to this office it is our obligation to conduct inquiries into this matter

"I have advised Ohio State University of our intentions to do so in this matter and I know Ohio State University intends to do so as well."

The State News quoted unnamed sources last week in a series of copyrighted stories in which OSU was accused of using improper practices to recruit football players.

The news quoted Duke as saying

"We conduct a diligent effort to look at any allegations concerning rules violations We will look into those published last week"

Warren S Brown executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association said he had not read the State News stories, "But we always look into allegations which appear in print"

The State News series followed statements from OSU Coach Woody Hayes in which he admitted publicly that he reported MSU for violating recruiting regulations.

In the investigation that followed, MSU football was heavily penalized with three-year suspension and the dismissal of the coaching staff

Walker wins mile run in Stockholm

STOCKHOLM — World record holder John Walker turned in a time of 3 53 07 but barely won the mile Monday in an international track and field meet hit by politics at the last minute because of the participation of Walker's country, New Zealand

Thomas Wessinghage of West Germany finished second in the race with a European record of 3 53 1 Wessinghage beat the former European record held by Eamon Coghlan of Ireland of 3 53 3

The Kenyan government forbid Mike Boit to participate in the 800 meters because New Zealanders were participating in the two-day competition

"This is ridiculous," said Walker, who saw his "dream race" against Tanzania's Filbert Bayi in the Olympic 1,500-meters wiped out because of politics. "Mike has been living in the United States the past three years and is more an American than a Kenyan now Also, since the Olympics he has been in the same competition as my fellow countrymen and myself in both Philadelphia and Edinburgh"

Wynn takes B.C. Open golf title

ENDICOTT N Y — Avoiding the "big numbers" which had cost him chances at previous titles, Bob Wynn Monday won the first tournament of his six-year tour career, the rain plagued $200,000 B C Open

Wynn earned the $40 000 first prize when rookie Bob Gilder missed a six-foot par putt on the 72nd hole to drop him out of a tie for the lead

A quadruple bogey eight on the 71st hole cost Wynn the lead in last year's Philadelphia Classic and a discouraging nine in the third round of last year's PGA Championship also cost him the lead in that event

He had similarly blown himself out of contention in the final round of tournaments for the past two weeks

Connors tops in Volvo International

HOOKSETT, N H — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, playing his brand of bash and dash tennis, overpowered Raul Ramirez Monday to win the $100,000 Volvo International tennis tournament for the second straight year, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3

In the rain-delayed final, moved indoors from the Mount Cranmore Tennis Club in the White Mountains to the tiny Algonquin Tennis Club Connors collected $16 000 and a new car Ramirez won the runner-up $8 000 prize

It was Connors' fourth straight win over the Mexican since Ramirez beat him in the dramatic fifth match of the North American zone Davis Cup finals last December in Mexico City.

Ramirez started slowly losing the first three games and slipping five times on the spongy Uniturf synthetic surface chosen because it most closely resembled the red clay at the outdoor courts at Mt Cranmore where the tourney started

Mays hits in Hall of Fame game

COOPERSTOWN N Y — Willie Mays emerged from retirement and delighted a crowd of 7 500 with a fifth inning single Monday but the Milwaukee Brewers still overpowered the New York Mets, 9-3 in the annual Hall of Fame game with the help of a pair of two-run homers by Sixto Lezcano

All but one of the Brewers' runs were the result of homers In addition to the pair by Lezcano, Mike Hegan hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning and Bernie Carbo connected for a solo homer in the seventh

John Milner hit a two-run homer to give the Mets a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning but the Brewers came back with three runs in their half of the frame and were never headed

Mays who retired at the end of the 1973 season and now serves as a goodwill ambassador for the Mets, came to bat twice during the game and lined a sharp single to left that helped the Mets produce their third run in the fifth inning

Brewers' Scott asks for trade

MILWAUKEE — Milwaukee first baseman George has produced some verbal fireworks on a day when the club's game with the Boston Red Sox was rained out, by saying he isn't happy with the Brewers

"I want to go where my talent is appreciated," Scott said

"I want to get back with the Red Sox I have to play for a winning club and I'd be appreciated at Boston," he told sportswriter Lou Chapman of the Milwaukee Sentinel

"There wouldn't be as much pressure on me, either, because I wouldn't have to carry the whole load. There'd be some big hitters around me," he said.

Scott recently has been showing signs of breaking out of a season-long hitting slump But he hasn't been happy with a recent comment from General Manager Jim Baumer that his weak hitting has been one of the main reasons Milwaukee is in last place

Hurricane cancels Jets-Giants game

NEW YORK — Hurricane Belle forced postponement of the New York Jets-New York Giants exhibition football game scheduled Monday night

A spokesman for the Jets said officials were concerned about fans getting to and from Yankee Stadium during the height of the Hurricane's pass over New York An announcement will be made today of a possible make-up date for the game.

Indians bop Sox, 4-2, to end skein

From Herald Wire Services

CLEVELAND — A baserunning miscue by Jorge Rota in the first inning cut short a White Sox rally and helped the Cleveland Indians break a five-game losing streak as they topped the Sox, 4-2, here Monday night

With one run in, Jim Spencer singled with Orta on second base in the first inning Orta failed to slide and ended up an easy third out as he was tagged by Cleveland catcher Ray Fosse

Ken Brett (6-7) went the distance and took the loss for the Sox

The Indians, after spotting the Sox a 1-0 lead in the top of the first, bounced back with two runs in the bottom of the frame and took the lead for good on Rico Carty's sacrifice fly and George Hendrick's two-out, RBI single

Cleveland added a run in the third and another in the seventh while the Sox could manage but one more tally that came on eighth-inning doubles by Jerry Hairston and Pat Kelly

Jim Bibby got the win for the Indians It was the first complete game of the season for Bibby, who is now 8-4 Bibby got help from Dave LaRoche, who came in to pitch the final 1 1/3 innings and got his 12th save of the year

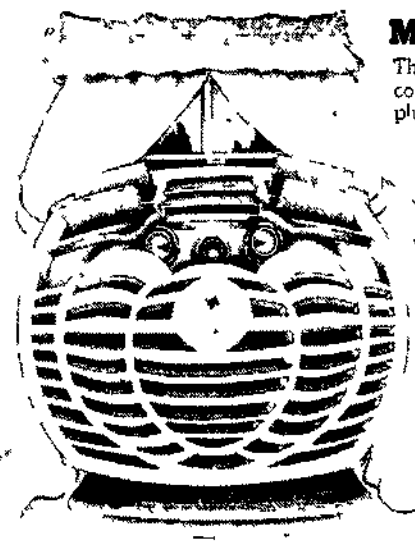
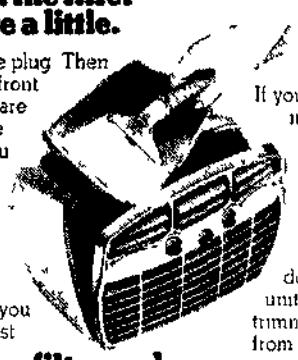
Clean your air conditioner and save some money.



A dirty air conditioner has to work harder. That wastes money.

When your air conditioner is dirty it has to work harder That takes more energy And you end up wasting money A good periodic cleaning will make your air conditioner more efficient, and will help you save on its operating costs Its possible to clean most window units in only about 10 minutes You should check your owners manual for specific cleaning and maintenance instructions but in most cases the steps to follow in cleaning are very simple And the more thoroughly you clean the more money you'll save

Vacuum the filter and save a little.

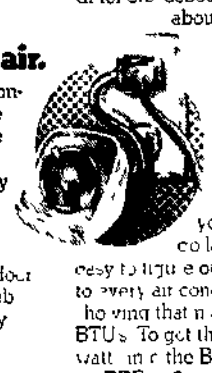


First pull the plug Then take off the front panel, and carefully remove the filter You can vacuum it while its still in place but its easier to clean the filter well if you remove it first

Wash the filter and save a little more.

Your owners manual will tell you whether the filter in your air conditioner is the kind that can be washed and reused If it is you can get the filter even cleaner by first vacuuming it and then hand washing it in warm water and a gentle detergent The type of soap recommended for washing woolens is best suited to this job

Save on central air.



If you've got central air conditioning in your home there are several steps you can take to keep your central air system running efficiently Remember to clean or replace your furnace filters early Clear away any debris from around the outdoor unit And keep grass and shrubs trimmed back to 12 inches away from any working parts

A call for help may help you save.

If you've had your air conditioner for several years and have never cleaned it before it could take a qualified serviceman to perform the kind of maintenance and repairs that may be necessary In an older unit the condenser coil refrigerant charge and motor parts may need expert attention

More ways to save.

The idea of using timers on air conditioners is catching on You can plug your window unit into an automatic timer made especially for air conditioner It works just like the kind of timer you'd use to turn your lights on automatically when you're away from home You can set the timer so that your air conditioner comes on an hour or so before you get home from work on a hot summer day That way your house will be comfortable when you arrive but you'll be using less electricity. And your air conditioner won't be running all day long

There's one last thing you should remember about air conditioners especially if you're thinking about buying a new one Air conditioner efficiency varies from model to model depending on what we call the Energy Efficiency Ratio, or EER The higher the EER the more cooling you get for your electric dollar year after year Its easy to figure out the EER Attached to every air conditioner is a metal plate showing that machines watts and BTUs To get the EER just divide the watts into the BTUs We recommend an EER of 8 or more

The more efficiently you use energy, the less energy you waste and the more money you save And an efficient air conditioner can save you plenty

Ask Andy

Recluse spider usually in hiding

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Tina Postell, 9, of Louisville, Ky., for her question:

WHAT IS THE BROWN RECLUSE SPIDER?

Spiders come in an assortment of colors, sizes and shapes and are found throughout the world. Although each has its own life story and special habits, all have certain things in common. Each spider has eight legs, two distinct body parts and special glands that can produce silk, even though the silk may not be used to spin a web.

The brown recluse spider is a small, rather drab little creature whose original North American home was the south central states. Its territory has expanded, however, and today it can be found in many other areas. Being able to live for quite some time without food or water, perhaps in shipping crates or boxes, makes it a good hitchhiker and probably accounts for its traveling to new locations.

Outdoors this secretive spider tends to hide beneath stones and other out-of-the-way places. Indoors it generally conceals itself in dark, dry places in the basement or in undisturbed closets, drawers or under furniture.

As secretive as it is, you probably would not pay it any special attention if you did see it. Not nearly as showy as the shiny black window, whose red hourglass tells you who she is, the brown recluse also has a special mark. On its back, just behind its head, is a darker patch shaped like a violin.

The body of the brown recluse measures about three-eighths of an inch. Its long, spindly legs span about an inch. The web it spins to catch the insects it preys on is not a nice, neat, ordinary web, but an irregular jumble of sticky threads that run this way and that without much planning.

Some scientists tell us that the borwn recluse is more apt to bite than most spiders, but others say that it is not all that ferocious. Whatever the case, it is best to leave it alone if you do see it because its bite can produce a very nasty wound. Unlike the venom of the black widow that affects the body as a whole, the venom of the brown recluse affects only the area around the bite.

A few hours after a person has been bitten by a brown recluse, the skin begins to swell and turn red. In time the tissue dies and leaves a sore that may be two inches across and take months or even a year to heal. Sad to say, some people have died as the result of a brown recluse bite.

Although there are a few spiders in North America whose bites harm man, a vast majority of spiders are helpful. They eat harmful insects that destroy crops and other insects that carry diseases.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Derek Street, 13, of Scranton, S.C., for his question:

WHAT IS A GERM?

Like the air we breathe, tiny organisms called germs are everywhere. These wee beasties are on our skin and inside our body. Three common types of germs are bacteria, viruses and protozoa. Scientists tell us that the kinds of bacteria number in the millions, and that some of the round, rod-shaped or coiled bacteria germs cause such diseases as diphtheria and tuberculosis. Although many of these one-celled organisms caused diseases, many others do not. In fact, many are useful, such as those that turn milk into cheese.

Viruses are super-small germs that can be seen only through a powerful electron microscope. There are hundreds of kinds of viruses; and because they multiply very rapidly once they invade cell tissue, they can cause a disease to flare up overnight. They are responsible for such unhappy experiences as mumps, measles and chicken pox. Protozoa are one-celled animals which can do great mischief. Malaria and sleeping sickness are both the result of protozoan germs taking hold. Fortunately, a healthy person resists most troublemaking germs.

Manilow's Ravinia concert a real crowd pleaser

by STEVE BROWN

Barry Manilow, who is springboarding from commercial jinglist to one of the biggest contemporary music attractions in the country, gave a sellout crowd at the Ravinia Festival everything they wanted Friday night.

If you missed the opener or last night's performance, don't worry because the concerte will form the basis for the singer's first television special to be aired on ABC-TV in the fall.

The New Yorker performed all of his hits during the two hour performance and delighted the audience with "Mandy," "Could It Be Magic," "Trying to Get The Feeling" and "It' a Mir acle." He saved his most current hit "I Write the Songs" (a ballad which he did not write), for an encore which he performed without much urging from the sold-out pavilion and packed lawn crowd that braved brisk temperatures at the North Shore park.

HE PROVED during the performance that he can duplicate near studio-quality with his music. Manilow has established himself as a topflight concert performer by putting more power in his ballads.

Mid-week review

Manilow also gave the audience a taste of his new album, "This One's For You" by performing the title song and the upbeat "Jump, Shout Boogie." He showcased his back-up singers, Lady Flash, who will be releasing their own album in the near future.

The concert took Manilow fans through all of the Brooklyn native's musical talents as he acknowledged his lucrative, but humble beginnings as a commercial writer. The audience received a medley of his work for McDonalds, State Farm Insurance, Stridex and Dr. Pepper with nearly the same enthusiasm as his later compositions. The high-powered performer also acknowledged the opportunity presented by his former boss, Bette Midler, who gave Manilow his start by allowing him to perform at concerts with her.

THE SINGER left the crowd dancing in the aisles and out on the lawn with an encore rendition of "It's a Miracle." The evening marked a triumphant return for Manilow, who last performed publicly in Chicago at the now-shuttered Mister Kelly's 18 months ago.

By the time Manilow returns to Chicago again, his following will probably be too big for even Ravinia and while it is good for the energetic, highly talented artist to become a financial success, something always seems to be lost when the music is performed in some of Chicago's massive, but musically unsatisfactory halls.

North ends guesswork

On the opposite end of the spectrum from the finesse designed to give declarer an extra entry to dummy is the finesse taken for the sheer joy of finessing.

South ducked the first heart and won the continuation. Then he led a trump. East took his ace and shifted to the jack of diamonds. South promptly finessed his queen and the defense had three tricks in. Some five minutes later South had finessed successfully against West's queen of clubs and won the rubber.

"Pretty good guess," chortled South.

"An unnecessary waste of time, energy and guesswork," replied North. "The hand was unbeatable with no problems at all."

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

South started out well by ducking the first heart, but when East led the jack of diamonds, South should have gone right up with his ace. Next would come a trump to dummy followed by a ruff of the last heart. Then South would lead his queen of diamonds and claim his contract. It wouldn't matter which opponent held the king of diamonds. He would be caught in an end play.

Every day is Ladies Day in the HERALD. Keep up with society and club doings in "Suburban Living", daily woman's coverage especially designed for the family.

Summertime . . . and dressin' is easy

It's equal rights for skirts, shorts, pants or what-have-you on suburban streets this summer.

The heat's on and the biggest summer coolers are a melting pot of simple looks and shapes suited to the season. Suburbanites, even the youngest of trend-setters, stress comfort, and it's separates over dresses, but no more sloppy looks of yesterday.

Besides denim, active fabrics include the crinkles, plisses and seersuckers, the cleaned up versions of the old rumples and crumples. Layering includes bared down minimal separates that show off a summer tan, topped with casual shirts to match the tempo of the temperature. Every manner of ensemble is holding its own as photographed by the paparazzi.

Area youngsters among models for charity fashion show

Four area children, Jennifer and Joy Lewin, 5-year-old twins and Susan Lewin, 7, and Debbie Blevas, 9, will be among the 65 models for "La Petite Fashionplate" to be held Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the Pick Congress Hotel.

Jennifer, Joy and Susan are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Lewin, Arlington Heights, and Debbie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Blivas, Buffalo Grove.

The show will be the premiere Midwest showing of Florence Eiseman's fall children's line under auspices of Saks Fifth Avenue. It will be held at the Pick Congress Hotel beginning with a luncheon.

Parents of each model sponsor tables of 10, each of whom contributes a minimum of $35 to the Jewish United Fund-Israel Emergency Fund.

"WITH ALL THESE changes you'd think I'd lose weight" quipped Pat Hickey who showed her audience how to put it all together for fall and winter wardrobes Thursday at Minnesota Fabrics. She urged sewers to personalize their garments with imagination and individual touches not found in pattern instructions. Trapunto stitching trims the back yoke of her dress.

"IN CHICAGO they don't laugh when I tell them my skirt is patterned in gangster stripes."

10 garments but many ensembles

by MARIANNE SCOTT

A T Shirt sewn onto the bottom half of a body suit was the only item of clothing Pat Hickey didn't take off for her one woman fashion show of 35 ensembles at Minnesota Fabrics in Hoffman Estates last week.

Pat accomplished these changes without leaving the runway, likening her stripping without teasing to the grammar school cloak room as she donned a skirt before pulling on or off her jump suit or slacks.

"The things you have to do these days to get a job!" laughed Pat, who is one of Minnesota Fabrics' home economists.

SHE CALLS HER show "Fashiontique" featuring only 10 garments that combine into at elast 35 ensembles. Basics, sewn from patterns from various pattern companies, are: blazer, loose fitting jacket, slacks, vest, street-length skirt, long skirt, blouse, T shirt, tunic dress; and jump suit. She also had a winter coat and a trunkful of accessories including hats, scarves, belts, handbags and an embroidered shawl.

Pat carried on an animated commentary, answered questions from the audience and helped locate a child who had become "lost" under the draped runway as she modeled. Her tips on sewing ranged from "never measure in centimeters unless you want a 137 waist" to "always wash and dry washable fabrics before cutting." This removes the sizing which has been applied to keep the fabric clean on the bolt; sewing over this sizing may cause the machine to skip stitches.

SHE ALSO GAVE tips on new seam treatments, pockets, waterproofing, machine embroidery, top stitching and applying fusibles, and told of new sewing aids such as the needle by Singer that sews on all fabrics; tunnel elastic, bound buttonhole kits; and the bottom half of a body suit.

Pat sewed her garments in shades of gray with solid slacks and coats, gangster-striped gray and white street skirt with solid and striped reversible vest, solid T, gray and pink print blouse, pink long skirt, white tunic and jump suit.

Extras for home sewers were a vinyl table cloth and picnic cushions, totes, an apron for the men and a child's smock top and slacks that can "grow" three sizes.

HER PROGRAM points out the advantages in planning rather than buying fabrics just because they please the fancy. Basically one should first pick a basic neutral in a flattering color, then add prints, plaids or stripes to match or blend.

To avoid mistakes don't rush into buying the fabrics. Instead, ask for samples and then live with them a few days. A total wardrobe that can mix and mingle takes careful planning.

"Fashiontique" has already been presented in area Minnesota Fabrics shops; however, those still wishing to see the show may do so at the Harlem-Irving shop this Thursday. A Christmas boutique is scheduled for the stores in October.

Chas. A. Stevens shows fall fashions

Fashion-conscious teens will enjoy the disco setting created by Chas. A. Stevens for its fashion show at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18.

Forty high school models will offer a variety of casual to dress-up wear using a mirrored backdrop, cubed runways and spinning mirrored balls.

Be Sauna safe

Don't subject your skin to too many facial saunas a week; you may dry it out. Once or twice a week for oily skin, once every two weeks for dry skin, and once every week or 10 days for normal skin should suffice.

Lab coat scores

If you want the look of "work clothes" without the expense, think about a patchpocketed medical lab coat, available at uniform houses and perfect for a different cover-up. Especially, if you dye it.

EXPERT ADVICE! Few men have the sense of fashion with the down-to-earth eye of Robert L. Green, fashion editor of Playboy. One of the mistakes he feels made most often across America by men is that they wear their pants too short. Nothing, he states, can be more unflattering. His advice — check that they "stop" in back just above the heel and touch the top of your the shoe in front. It creates a taller, longer leg look. Now New York '76 G.J.L.

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Harrises guilty of kidnap rap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

$10,700 in tires, rims reported stolen

Tires and wheel rims worth $10,700 have been stolen from the Rock Road Construction Co., 125 W. Armstrong Rd., Des Plaines.

Rock Road officials told police Monday tires and rims have been stolen between June 28 to July 28.

Entry was gained to the Rock Road rear yard where the tires were kept by cutting the fence, police reported.

Officials said the tires and rims were chained together.

Retail spending increases 13% in year's time

Retail spending in Des Plaines for the first seven months of 1976 is up 13 per cent over the same period last year.

City Comptroller Duane L. Blietz said the increase in sales is reflected in the amount of state sales tax paid to the city. The city receives 1 per cent of all retail sales while the state receives 4 per cent.

City records show that the city received $1,767,853 in retail sales receipts through July 31 of this year compared with $1,566,198 for the first seven months of last year.

"We were expecting sales tax revenue to be up this year, but we weren't expecting it to be up as much as it is," Blietz said. "I would attribute it primarily to higher automotive sales."

TONY KAITSCHUCK, executive director of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said he has not seen the latest sales tax figures but is encouraged by the increase.

"Business seems to be holding its own and in some cases going up, which is good," he said.

Kaitschuck said he believes the increase in retail sales in the city is primarily the result of improving economic conditions.

"There seems to be a general impression that things are turning around a little," he said.

Kaitschuck said he expects retail business to increase substantially after the Superblock shopping mall opens next spring in downtown Des Plaines.

"THERE HAVE BEEN a few, but not a great deal of businesses that have opened recently in Des Plaines," he said. "When the mall opens there will be a lot more businesses."

The three-story enclosed shopping mall, under construction at Ellinwood and Center streets, is expected to bring Des Plaines $15 million to $20 million in additional retail business annually. The increased business would mean $150,000 to $200,000 in annual sales tax revenue for the city.

City seeking swine flu vaccination volunteers

The Des Plaines Health Dept. is seeking volunteers to work in the city's swine flu mass immunization program.

Jean Branding, city health director, said the city needs 200 nonprofessional and 40 professional volunteers per day to work at the two-day clinic. Anyone wishing to help should call 297-1200.

Mrs. Branding said the immunization program was scheduled for Sept. 10 and 11 at Maine West High School, 1755 S. Wolf Rd., but has been postponed for at least a month.

Cook County Health Dept. officials coordinating the countywide program said it has been delayed until the question of liability insurance for vaccine manufacturers is settled. The federal government currently is considering insuring vaccine manufacturers against suits filed by those who suffer ill effects from the vaccine.

Mrs. Branding said the city has contacted many organizations about the immunization program and will continue to solicit volunteers until new dates are announced.

In addition to the citywide flu inoculation program, Maine Township also is planning a similar program for the township's 10,000 to 12,000 senior citizens. That program also has been delayed because of the question of liability insurance.

Life here too fast for ya? Doc agrees; he's leavin'

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

FORMER WHEELING Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson stands outside courtroom at Cook County Criminal Court Building. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to bribery and official misconduct charges in connection with a zoning variation request by a village company.

Suburban digest

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Balanced Dist. 214 budget seen

The 1976-77 tentative budget for High School Dist. 214 that calls for expenditures of $48 million, a 6.63 per cent increase from last year's $45 million budget, will permit a balanced budget, school officials said Monday.

"We should live within our revenues," said board member John Costello. He said surplus funds totaling more than $7 million in the five major accounts will allow the district to prevent deficit spending this year although expenditures will exceed new revenue by about $2 million.

THE DISTRICT anticipates receiving $46 million from property taxes, state aid and other sources in the five major funds—the education, building bond and interest, transportation and retirement funds. The 1976-77 revenue is expected to be 16.5 per cent greater than last year's revenue of $39.6 million.

The district also anticipates receiving $55,000 in the site and construction fund and an additional $1.1 million in the working cash fund. The working cash fund which will total $15.2 million this year, can be used for loans to other funds.

The revenue projections also do not include potential additional tax revenue from the elimination of the tax rate rollback—a state mandate which requires the district to lower its tax rate. Last week, Gov. Daniel Walker tentatively approved a bill which would eliminate the requirement for cutting the tax rate.

Roderick McLennan, associate superintendent for instructional services, said the amount of additional funds that might be realized from the bill's provisions is not known at this time.

THE BUDGET calls for an 8.8 per cent increase in expenditure in the education fund from $31.9 million last year to $34.8 million this year. The education fund includes salary increases averaging 11 per cent for teachers for the 1976-77 school year and administration salary increases.

The district anticipates a .12 cent drop in expenditures in the building fund from $6,387,171 last year to $6,379,270 this year. The transportation fund shows the greatest increase, 19.54 per cent, from $1.7 million to $2 million.

Other funds include the bond and interest fund, a 5.35 per cent decrease from $4.1 million to $3.9 million; retirement fund, an increase from $854,022 to $921,672; and the site and construction fund, a decrease from $244,118 to $125,000.

Medak nominated for state board

Vivian Medak, chairman of the Oakton College Board of Trustees, has been nominated for a position on the Illinois Community College Board by Gov. Daniel Walker.

If the Illinois Senate approves the nomination, Mrs. Medak said she will have to resign her chairmanship of the Oakton board. She has served on the board since April 1973.

Mrs. Medak said her reaction to the nomination was mixed.

"I realize it's a great honor, but at the same time I have such close ties to Oakton I feel that I have a lot of unfinished business there," she said.

Mrs. Medak said she could not remain on the Oakton board because of the appearance of a conflict of interest resulting from the ICCB's role as the agency, which oversees the operations of every community college in Illinois.

In addition to her service on the Oakton board, Mrs. Medak has been active on the Niles Township High School Dist. 219 Board of Education, the Girl Scouts, the League of Women Voters and the Illinois Community College Trustees Organization.

Mrs. Medak is a graduate of the Chicago Teachers' college and Northeastern Illinois University, where she received a masters degree in counseling and learning disabilities. She has been a resident of Lincolnwood for 22 years.

Students from city achieve academic recognition

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale named the following Des Plaines students to its dean's list: Glenn P. Berry, Frank N. Darras, Wendy C. Hansen, Donald W. Kliment, Kimberly Larocca, Carl L. Mann, Lori D. Rowells, Debora A. Schimmel, Richard F. Schulz, Lynne M. Sexton, Carl E. Wells and David A. Wenz.

Seven students were named to the dean's list at Augustana College. They are Kevin P. McAuliffe, Spencer Miller, Michael R. Mitsos, John C. O'Connor, Mark E. Thompson, Nancy M. Wein and Joan M. Wolter. Holly Norwick, achieved highest honors for her studies last semester at the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point.

Students named to the Elmhurst College dean's list included Judith J. Branding, Jeffrey J. Gallichio, Brenda L. Moll, Donna M. Pantil, William C. Petty, Kathryn A. Sahs, Andy Seidler and Susan J. Spiegler.

Carol Hughes and William Slapke were named to the dean's list at DePauw University.

8 Southern Illinois University students won plaudits for outstanding academic achievement at the university's annual honors day. They are Karel Celichowski, Lowell B. Feinstein, Mary E. Gardner, Wendy C. Hansen, Donald W. Kliment, Debora A. Schimmel, Lynne M. Sexton and David A. Wenz.

Eastern Illinois University students completing degree requirements were Mary A. Byrne and Richard A. Neetz, M.A.; Roberta M. Bober, Maria Cruz and Donna M. Waytine, B.A.; Lynette J. Wade, B.S.; Bruce J. Francione, B.S.; Lena M. Annoreno and Lynnette J. White, B.S.; and Denise C. Allen, B.S.

Suburbs focus of meter tampering: Edison chief

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

by LINDA PUNCH

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent to charges of bribery and official misconduct at his arraignment Monday.

Criminal Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson.

Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and has lived in this area all his life. Monoson appeared subdued throughout the arraignment and had no comment on his plea.

FOLLOWING THE arraignment, Monoson was taken to State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office to be fingerprinted.

Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury. He is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Carey said Monoson allegedly asked George Carpin, president of GEC industries, for a $10,000 no-collateral loan in return for Monoson's using his influence to obtain a zoning variation and occupancy permit for the company. Monoson is chairman of the village real estate and zoning committee.

Carpin in June asked the village to grant a zoning variation so he would not have to install sprinklers or a fire wall in a recently completed addition to his building. The board denied the request 6-0 and later told Carpin it would revoke his business license by September if the addition was not brought into compliance. The village also refused to issue an occupancy permit for the addition.

CAREY SAID Monoson first visited the factory in June to inspect the building for a report to the board. He said Monoson allegedly returned in July and asked for the $10,000 no-collateral loan in return for using his influence in obtaining the zoning variation and the occupancy permit.

Caprin reported the incident to the state's attorney's office July 21 and was equipped with a recording device for a meeting the next day when Monoson allegedly repeated his offer.

Monoson resigned from the board July 30, saying the indictment makes "it impossible for me to continue." He said he leaves the board with the knowledge "that I have not violated the law."

If convicted, Monoson faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison or a fine of $10,000.

William, Emily Harris guilty of kidnap, robbery

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

Home admitting patients again

Winchester Home, Lake County's public nursing home, is admitting patients again after admissions were closed for a week because of staff problems, Lake County Board Member Mariellen Sabato said.

"We wanted to continue to give good care and we need enough people to give that care," said Mrs. Sabato, chairman of the county health, education and welfare committee. Admissions were reopened Thursday.

The nursing home has lost approximately 50 employes during the summer for various reasons, Mrs. Sabato said, about half of them have been replaced.

Some employes said they were leaving for better salaries, health or personal reasons, or because they were moving out of the area, Acting Administrator Ana Mae Schotanus said.

Some turnover is due to the advancement of nursing aides who are hired, trained, and then quit to work for private nurs ng homes in the area, Mrs. Sabato said.

"We are screening them a little more closely this time," Mrs. Sabato said. "We did a lot of training for other nursing homes."

An alarming peek inside the Sox 'monster'

–Sports

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Zerkle warns

Street takeover poses problems

Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle Monday said village officials will have to overcome several major problems before taking over private streets in townhouse and condominium apartment developments.

"We've got a community out here watching pretty closely. I see some problems built in that might not immediately surface. The biggest one is that the streets are not built in conformance with village street regulations," Zerkle said.

Zerkle and Trustees John Cole and Charles Jackson met with nine representatives of Wheeling condominium associations to discuss plans for dedication of private streets. Associations represented include Lakeside Villas, Cedar Run, Tahoe Village and Chelsea Cove.

Zerkle said both sides "have to get down to what objectives we want to accomplish."

"WE HAVE TO DECIDE what the problems are and address ourselves to moving around those problems," he said.

Coles said the most realistic agreement the group can reach is general guidelines for village takeover of the private drives.

"Each individual development is going to be a little different," he said.

Coles said no one is "realistically thinking that we can take over the streets at no cost. We all know it will cost," he said.

LARRY MELNICK of the Wheeling Area Condominium Council said the biggest concern of all residents "is to get down to something acceptable to everybody. Nothing will be 100 per cent acceptable to everybody," he said.

The condominium associations have agreed to appoint two members from each development to negotiate with village officials. The next meeting is scheduled Aug. 25.

Following the street discussion, Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon canceled the scheduled board meeting for lack of a quorum.

Dist. 96 reviews $2 million budget

A $2 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year was reviewed Monday by the Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education.

The budget allots $2,027,999 for expenditures and projects $1,446,199 in revenues.

The $581,800 deficit will be covered mainly by the district's surplus cash balance. However, $11,000 was transferred from the bond and interest fund to the operations, building and maintenance fund to prevent a deficit in the operations fund.

Board member Clarke Walser, chairman of the finance committee, said two uncertainties in the budget are the district's assessed valuation and the amount of state aid it will receive in the coming school year.

WALSER SAID changes in the state aid formula approved last week by Gov. Daniel Walker will not affect Dist. 96, but "what is more critical is the action Walker takes on the appropriation bill." That bill currently is awaiting the governer's signature.

This year's budget is a 6.2% increase over last year's $1.9 million budget. This year's budget includes projected costs for opening Kildeer School in January.

The tenative budget also allots $10,000 for a teacher and $7,000 for equipment to begin a home economics program at Twin Groves School.

The budget allows a 3 per cent increase in administrator, teacher and other staff salaries. Teachers currently are negotiating further salary increases for the coming school year.

The budget will be on public display beginning Friday at Kildeer School, Long Grove. A public hearing will be held at 8 p.m. Sept. 13 at Kildeer School before the board gives final approval to the budget.

Views sought on health planning

The Health Systems Agency for Lake, Kane and McHenry counties is seeking residents' opinions on health planning for the tri-county area.

Advisory councils to the federally designated health agency are being formed in each of the counties to advise the 30-member health agency board.

A meeting to explain the advisory councils and how Lake County residents can become involved has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Aug. 18 in Cook Memorial Library, 413 N. Milwaukee Ave., Libertyville.

Membership on the councils will be primarily of health care consumers. Interested citizens and representatives of senior citizens, PTAs and other groups are urged to attend the meeting.

Joyce Klug of Lake Zurich, a member of the agency board, urges residents in the southwestern portion of the county to participate in the meeting. Mrs. Klug said the southwest county has not been adequately represented in the past on health planning agencies.

"Experience is not necessary," Mrs. Klug said. "Whatever training is needed will be provided. Your opinion has value, come to the meeting and see how you might become involved."

Suburbs focus of meter tampering: Edison chief

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Increased traffic from the future expansion of Lake-Cook Road may force village youngsters to find another place to play.

Over next few years

Lake-Cook Rd. change to create major highway

by BILL HURLEY

Lake-Cook Road, a scenic, lightly traveled street with few lights and no congestion, will be changed into a major highway during the next few years, dividing Buffalo Grove along county lines.

"It will be divisionary," Trustee Clarice Rech said. "It will be difficult for the community to function in terms of getting from one part of the village to another."

"I would prefer not to have the road go through Buffalo Grove, definitely," Village Pres. Edward Fabish said. "It will divide Buffalo Grove just like Dundee Road is dividing Buffalo Grove now. There's no way you're going to get around that."

CONSTRUCTION workers will come into the village in about seven months with bulldozers and cement trucks to rip up Lake-Cook Road and replace it with a four-lane major highway that eventually will extend from Highland Park to Barrington.

The project will follow the current route of the road from Arlington Heights Road to Buffalo Creek. At the creek, the new route will run between village hall and Emmerich Park to Ill. Rte. 83 where it will hook up with another phase of the project under construction.

The road is planned to be a limited access highway with several major intersections and traffic signals at Arlington Heights Road, Raupp Boulevard, Buffalo Grove Road and Mundelein Road.

One possible problem Rech foresees is that businesses will be attracted to the highway and will pressure the village board into granting commercial development as the highest and best use of adjacent land.

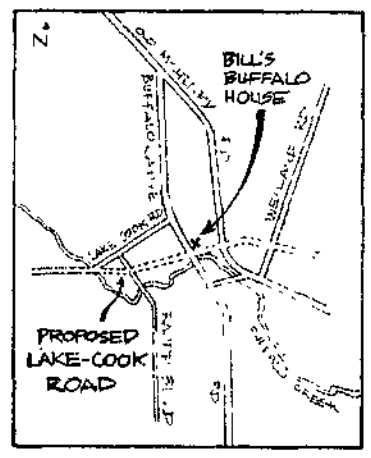
"It's very feasible that there's going to be a lot of commercial zoning," she said. "I don't think anybody now can visualize what it will be, but I think it will be like an expressway," she said.

RECH SAID the limited access highway will attract a great deal of traffic from Ill. Rte. 53 when the two roads are connected and form an interchange south of Long Grove.

Rech, who opposed the project when it was first proposed several years ago, said the road is not needed and only will encourage more traffic.

Fabish said little commercial development will arise along the highway.

"I'm sure I speak for the board when I say we won't allow any commercial along most of the route," he said.



Fabish said land along the route already is zoned and the only commercial parcel west of Buffalo Grove Road is four acres on the southeast corner of Arlington Heights and Lake-Cook roads.

Proponents of the highway extension say it will promote business in the proposed downtown area north of Lake-Cook Road near Buffalo Grove

William, Emily Harris guilty of kidnap, robbery

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

FORMER WHEELING Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson stands outside courtroom at Cook County Criminal Court Building. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to bribery and official misconduct charges in connection with a zoning variation request by a village company.

Suburban digest

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Surplus funds to cover deficit

Dist. 96 mulls $2 million budget

A $2 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year was reviewed Monday by the Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education.

Class in welding to begin Aug. 25

Advanced welding and specialization, a course designed to complement and advance an experienced welder's skills, will be offered at the College of Lake County, 19351 W. Washington St., Grayslake.

The three-credit hour class meets for 16 weeks from 1 to 3:50 p.m. Wednesdays and from 1 to 2:50 p.m. Fridays beginning Aug. 25.

Lake-Cook Road to divide village

Road and Ill. Rte. 83, aid the development of an industrial park east of Weiland Road and relieve traffic congestion on Dundee Road.

Rech said such a highway should be on the perimeters of a village instead of cutting through its center as Lake-Cook Road will.

"I DON'T think it's worth it in terms of diversification of the village. I don't like to see the village split up," she said.

Fabish said the road will be an advantage to Buffalo Grove residents until it is extended through the village. He said he would like to see it constructed as far west as Ill. Rte. 83 but stop there. He said residents would have access to the west and Edens Expressway without having traffic generated through the village.

But Cook County Highway officials had different ideas.

"At first I opposed this as a four-lane highway, but the county just persisted until they got what they wanted," Fabish said.

"Lake-Cook Road was never intended to be a major road. It was supposed to be a little collector street," he said.

Bill's Buffalo House to move to new site

Bill's Buffalo House, a landmark Buffalo Grove restaurant, will be relocated by the end of the year to make room for future expansion of Lake-Cook Road, according to co-owner Geri Teichman.

The restaurant, located along Buffalo Grove Road near Buffalo Creek, is being moved into a lot behind its present location.

Mrs. Teichman and Gary Roeper, the other owner, will remodel the dining and kitchen areas before moving the bar. Mrs. Teichman said remodeling work will begin next month.

The owners received village board permission last month to relocate onto the flood plain. Trustees said the approval was an exceptional one based on the restaurant's historical significance.

Modern Service Garage was remodeled early this year to make room for the highway. Roger Carew, garage owner, said 14 feet were removed from the front of his building.

Several homes also have been moved back from the roadway between Buffalo Grove Road and Ill. Rte. 83.

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

IT'S A WET WAY of putting your name in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Craig Culver and four other Elk Grove Village teens are determined to swim their way to fame at the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool. Their goal: to break the existing record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes, set in 1968 by six teen-age boys in Buttermere, England.

Tax jump plan scheduled for discussion today

Elk Grove Village trustees tonight will receive some of the numbers expected to add up to a property tax increase next year.

At its 8 p.m. meeting in the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave., the village board will hear Finance Director George C. Coney's fiscal report, the first step in setting a tax levy.

During the next four weeks, the board will adopt a tax levy ordinance. Trustees generally indicated during budget discussions last spring that a tax increase is inevitable and their sentiments appear unchanged.

"IT CERTAINLY SEEMS there will be an increase in the property taxes so we can keep up services," Village Pres. Charles J. Zettek said.

The amount of the tax increase is unknown because the village board first must decide how much revenue it needs from the tax levy.

Coney said, however, "there have been no significant changes" from his revenue and expense projections of last spring. At that time, Coney said the village's property tax rate might have to be increased 5 or 6 per cent.

Except for Schaumburg which does not levy a property tax, Elk Grove Village's portion of real estate tax bills remained the lowest in the Northwest suburbs this year. The village's tax rate was 64.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation, up from 60.8 cents a year ago.

THE NEW TAX LEVY ordinance must be approved and on record with the Cook and DuPage counties assessors' offices by Sept. 14.

Trustee Theodore J. Staddler said he will ask the village board tonight to set a special meeting of the judiciary, planning and zoning committee for discussion of the tax levy ordinance.

Staddler said he expects there will have to be a tax increase but added he first "would like to see the figures, where we are at."

Among the figures the board will have to consider is the less-than-anticipated increase in the village's assessed valuation this year. The assessed valuation increased $14,406,947 to $334,049,044. It had been expected

Harrises guilty of robbery, kidnap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

A hearty effort to break a record

by TOM VON MALDER

Five Elk Grove Village teen-agers are attempting to swim their way into the "Guinnis Book of World Records" and raise money for the Chicago Heart Assn. at the same time.

The youths began a swimming marathon at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool, 999 Leicester Rd. Their aim is to break the record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes set during 11 days in 1968 by six boys, ages 13 to 15 in Buttermere, England.

"We're way ahead of our planned pace," 16-year-old Gary Drake said Monday after he and his friends had swum 66 miles in 27 hours. "We should only have 54 miles by now. Plus, they set the record with six (swimmers) and we have only five."

THE IDEA OF breaking a record came from 17-year-old Jim Cashman whose father is one of the park commissioners. Jim enlisted the cooperation of Craig Culver, 17; Greg Bachus, 16, Tim Bird, 15, and Gary.

"Jim just asked me to do it, and I wasn't doing anything else, so I said yes," Gary said, resting with three of his teammates while Greg swam back and forth in the outdoor pool.

Each swimmer tries to do 144 lengths of the pool, the equivalent of two miles, during his hour. Then he four hours to eat and rest. The swim is to last until 4 p.m. Next Monday, and the swimmers hope to reach 400 miles.

"We stay at the pool, unless we go home for a good meal," Gary said. "We rest in the locker room so we can't hear the other swimmers as easily. We sleep about three times a day.

"WHEN YOU START your hour it's so bad because you know you've got so long to go. Then when there's about 10 minutes left it gets easy. But it's hard to get going again when your next hour comes up."

At the inside pool, which is used as well as the outdoor pool (the swim only need be continuous, not in the same pool), the swimmers have put up a donation for the Heart Assn. which Gary said is starting to fill.

And when it's over? "At the end, I don't know what we'll do. We're probably going to tear the pool apart," Gary said.

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

FORMER WHEELING Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson stands outside courtroom at Cook County Criminal Court Building. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to bribery and official misconduct charges in connection with a zoning variation request by a village company.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Balanced Dist. 214 budget seen

The 1976-77 tentative budget for High School Dist. 214 that calls for expenditures of $48 million, a 6.63 per cent increase from last year's $45 million budget, will permit a balanced budget, school officials said Monday.

"We should live within our revenues," said board member John Costello. He said surplus funds totaling more than $7 million in the five major accounts will allow the district to prevent deficit spending this year although expenditures will exceed new revenue by about $2 million.

THE DISTRICT anticipates receiving $46 million from property taxes, state aid and other sources in the five major funds—the education, building bond and interest, transportation and retirement funds. The 1976-77 revenue is expected to be 16.5 per cent greater than last year's revenue of $39.6 million.

The district also anticipates receiving $55,000 in the site and construction fund and an additional $1.1 million in the working cash fund. The working cash fund which will total $15.2 million this year, can be used for loans to other funds.

The revenue projections also do not include potential additional tax revenue from the elimination of the tax rate rollback—a state mandate which requires the district to lower its tax rate. Last week, Gov. Daniel Walker tentatively approved a bill which would eliminate the requirement for cutting the tax rate.

Roderick McLennan, associate superintendent for instructional services, said the amount of additional funds that might be realized from the bill's provisions is not known at this time.

THE BUDGET calls for an 8.8 per cent increase in expenditure in the education fund from $31.9 million last year to $34.8 million this year. The education fund includes salary increases averaging 11 per cent for teachers for the 1976-77 school year and administration salary increases.

The district anticipates a .12 cent drop in expenditures in the building fund from $6,387,171 last year to $6,379,270 this year. The transportation fund shows the greatest increase, 19.54 per cent, from $1.7 million to $2 million.

Other funds include the bond and interest fund, a 5.35 per cent decrease from $4.1 million to $3.9 million; retirement fund, an increase from $854,022 to $921,672; and the site and construction fund, a decrease from $244,118 to $125,000

Dist. 54 parents urged to attend

School information day Aug. 24

School information day has been scheduled for Aug. 24 at all Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 schools.

Parents should go to the school their children will attend in September, where they will receive information on the opening of school Sept. 1, class assignment, bus schedules, supply lists and student insurance applications.

Parents may register their children for the parent-paid lunch program at this time. Elementary students who stay for lunch will bring their lunch from home and may purchase milk from the school for the first part of the year for $4. Milk tickets will be sold at the junior high schools at a cost of 50 cents for 11 tickets.

JUNIOR HIGH students will pay a $3.50 towel fee for physical education classes. This is the only fee required of Dist. 54 students.

Student insurance will be available for $3 for school-time coverage and $18 for 24-hour coverage.

School information day hours will be from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at all schools. The junior highs will be open from 7 to 8 p.m., but elementary schools will not be open in the evening

Parents of children who will be in kindergarten or fifth grade are reminded that children are required to have a physical examination completed prior to the first day of school. Completed exam forms may be turned in Aug. 24.

Tax jump plan scheduled for talks tonight

BUILDING PERMIT fees through July, are down $16,598 at $119,689 although the village reached a record sales tax total in May.

Coney said the $200,666.31 sales tax figure, of which the village receives 1 per cent, was about $5,000 higher than any previous monthly total. The figure was released Monday by the Illinois Dept. of Revenue.

If the high sales tax levels could be maintained, it would mean an extra $200,000 annually for the village, Coney said.

The village board in May approved a 1976-77 budget of $4,495,803, expecting an estimated deficit of $119,891 for the year. The board also deferred 5 per cent village employe pay raises until this month to save money.

Suburbs focus of meter tampering: Edison chief

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

Warm greetings . . .

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Harrises guilty of kidnap rap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

Ethics code plan postponed again by village panel

Action on a controversial ethics code proposed for Hoffman Estates public officials was again postponed by village judiciary committee members Monday night.

The ordinance, proposed by Village Pres. Virginia Hayter earlier this year, has been on the committee docket since February. Trustee Melvin Timmons, chairman of the committee, said further discussion of the code was postponed until committee members could examine a preliminary draft drawn up by Village Mgr. George Longmeyer.

The members will deliver comments on information in the draft to Longmeyer before the next month's scheduled committee meeting, he said.

TIMMONS SAID the rough draft from Longmeyer was requested by committee members last month after it was decided another draft based on a Palatine ordinance was not suited to the needs of Hoffman Estates employes.

Longmeyer's draft is based on several sources and is intended to be more suited to village problems, Timmons said. He did not make the contents of the report public, however, and said he would not comment further until he had a chance to study the report.

Discussion of past code proposals, which would affect all municipal staff members and public officials, has revolved around restrictions that would require real estate workers on the village board or village commissions to sign statements saying they will not accept income from property sales pending before the village.

It also requires brokers to refuse income from that sale for a one year period following any action on the property, Trustee William Cowin, a self-employed real estate broker, has criticized that part of the proposed code repeatedly, labeling it "impossible to live with," and "discriminatory."

$763,000 budget on parks agenda

A proposed $763,000 budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year will be presented to the Schaumburg Park District Board for adoption Thursday.

The park board meeting at 8:30 p.m. at the Meineke Community Center, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, is open to the public.

The budget provides 6 per cent across the board pay increases for park district employes and represents an increase of $115,000 over last year, Jerry Baer, park business manager, said Monday.

Baer said the park district tax rate is 32.5 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation, down from last year's 32.7 cents, meaning taxes on a house with an assessed valuation of $20,000 is $65.

Baer said the park district will file a separate 5.89-cent levy to make up for $180,000 in taxes "temporarily" lost this year when a clerical error mistakenly listed the corporate levy rate at 4.11 cents per $100 assessed valuation rather than 10 cents.

Baer said the error, discovered last month, will cause a "temporary" cash flow problem not expected to affect park programs or facilities. Eventually, the district will collect more in taxes because the delayed 5.89-cent levy will be applied to a tax base of $301 million, up $66 million from last year.

$13,500 car taken from Woodfield

Thieves have stolen an auto valued at $13,500 from the Woodfield Shopping Center parking lot in Schaumburg, police reported Monday.

Police said a white and green 1976 Lincoln Continental Mark IV belonging to Constance Hummel of Schaumburg was stolen between noon and 1:15 p.m. Saturday while its owner was shopping.

An alarming peek inside the Sox 'monster'

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

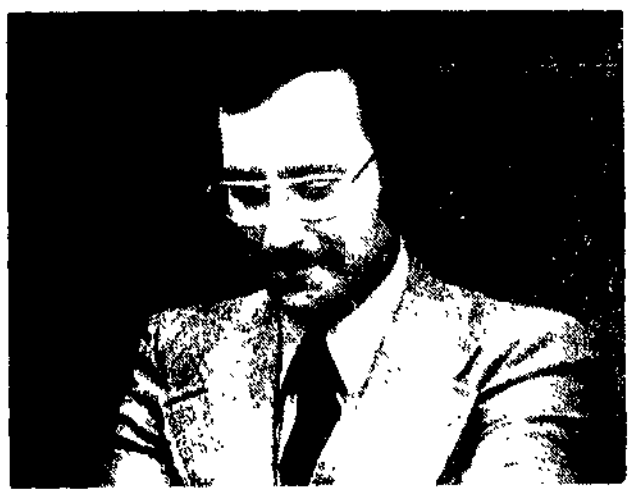
In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.



FORMER WHEELING Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson stands outside courtroom at Cook County Criminal Court Building. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to bribery and official misconduct charges in connection with a zoning variation request by a village company.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year." Bonder said "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Meter 'fixing' concentrated in suburbs: official

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

Dist. 54 school data day scheduled for Aug. 24

School information day has been scheduled for Aug. 24 at all Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 schools.

Parents should go to the school their children will attend in September, where they will receive information on the opening of school Sept. 1, class assignment, bus schedules, supply lists and student insurance applications.

Parents may register their children for the parent-paid lunch program at this time. Elementary students who stay for lunch will bring their lunch from home and may purchase milk from the school for the first part of the year for $4. Milk tickets will be sold at the junior high schools at a cost of 50 cents for 11 tickets.

JUNIOR HIGH students will pay a $3.50 towel fee for physical education classes. This is the only fee required of Dist. 54 students.

Student insurance will be available for $3 for school-time coverage and $18 for 24-hour coverage

School information day hours will be from 9 to 11:30 a.m and from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at all schools. The junior highs will be open from 7 to 8 p.m., but elementary schools will not be open in the evening

Parents of children who will be in kindergarten or fifth grade are reminded that children are required to have a physical examination completed prior to the first day of school. Completed exam forms may be turned in Aug. 24.

St. John School signup under way

St. John Lutheran School, Irving Park and Rodenburg Road, Roselle, currently is holding registration for its 1976-1977 prekindergarten through eighth grade classes.

Parents wishing to enroll their children can do so between 9 a.m. and noon each weekday. Special appointments for other times can be made by calling the school principal at 529-5328 or 894-4787.

A child must be 3 years old before Dec. 1, 1976 to enroll in the school's prekindergarten classes. Kindergarten students must be 5 years old before Dec. 1.

First graders must be 6 years old before Dec. 1, 1976. Birth ceritificates should be brought to registration of first grade and kindergarten studens.

The instructional program at St. John conforms with Illinois requirements as well as those of the Lutheran Church, officials said. The school, which has a full-time teaching staff of six and an instrumental music instructor, is one of 1209 maintained by congregations of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Opinions asked on dial-a-ride plan

Schaumburg officials will seek residents' comment on a proposed subscription bus and dial-a-ride system at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the public safety building, 1000 W. Schaumburg Rd.

The village has submitted an application asking the Regional Transportation Authority for full funding for a system expected to cost about $500,000 for its first year of operation.

The application also asks the agency to waive its $100,000 fsnding limit for demonstration projects and its requirement that local communities pay 25 per cent of the cost.

The system was suggested in a $42,000 study done for Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates last year by consultants Jack E. Leisch and Associates.

Hoffman Estates officials had promised to help with research needed to start the transportation program but say their tight budget will not permit financial assistance.

Hoffman Estates village board last week refused to join Schaumburg in applying for the RTA funding.

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 23-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Harrises guilty of kidnap rap

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $230 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process

Day camp for Cubs at Kimball Hill Park

Cub Scouts from Rolling Meadows, Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect are participating in a week-long Sauk Woods District day camp, at Kimball Hill Park, Rolling Meadows.

The park is located just north of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center on Kirchoff Road, and the entrance is at the west end of the shopping center parking lot.

Boys attending the camp will participate in a physical fitness program, sports, nature lore and crafts classes.

Cub Scouts also will work to earn Webelos activity pins and Scout awards that will be presented Friday.

Library board under fire for tax rate boost

Several members of the Rolling Meadows finance committee Monday blasted the public library board for almost doubling the 1977-78 library tax rate by approving a budget that calls for a 66 per cent increase over this year's budget.

Despite its criticism, however, the committee voted 3-2 to present the library board's request for a $12,000 loan to build a parking lot to the city council.

"You sold the city council a bill of goods when you promised not to sock it to us the first year you could," Ald. Fredrick Jacobson, 5th said.

"I don't object to the loan request, but you reneged on pre-referendum promises to raise the taxes gradually," he said.

"SOME OF THE councilmen may come at you with fire in their eyes," said Ald James Huddleston, 4th, finance committee chairman. "We will take your request for a loan to the city council, but we will expect you to be there to answer questions."

Library board Pres. Rodney Dahlin's request for a one-year, $12,000, interest-free loan will come before the full city council tonight.

Dahlin said the library board believes it has complied with its pre-referendum promises. "We never said we would raise the tax rate by only 4 cents. We said we would see what was needed."

"The increase in our operating budget will raise the tax rate from the present 15 to 21 cents," he said. "We could not pass up the opportunity to purchase the land, which became available after our referendum commitment," he said.

JACOBSON, however, said before the referendum library officials had promised city residents and officials there would be only a gradual increase in the tax rate.

The library board recently purchased a $37,000, 1.75-acre tract and plans to construct a 20-space parking lot on the site. Eventual use of the property is for a library addition, but the library board has said the most immediate need for the land is to create additional parking.

The library board, because of a February referendum, has authority to raise its tax rate from 15 to 29 cents per $100 evaluation. The board expects to pay for the land purchase and improvements when it receives its tax money next October.

Dahlin said he was requesting the loan so the library could begin construction immediately, instead of waiting a year for funds.

Balanced budget seen in Dist. 214

The 1976-77 tentative budget for High School Dist. 214 that calls for expenditures of $48 million, a 6.63 per cent increase from last year's $45 million budget, will permit a balanced budget, school officials said Monday.

"We should live within our revenues," said board member John Costello. He said surplus funds totaling more than $7 million in the five major accounts will allow the district to prevent deficit spending this year although expenditures will exceed new revenue by about $2 million.

THE DISTRICT anticipates receiving $46 million from property taxes, state aid and other sources in the five major funds—the education, building bond and interest, transportation and retirement funds. The 1976-77 revenue is expected to be 16.5 per cent greater than last year's revenue of $39.6 million.

The district also anticipates receiving $55,000 in the site and construction fund and an additional $1.1 million in the working cash fund. The working cash fund which will total $15.2 mil-

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

IT'S A WET WAY of putting your name in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Craig Culver and four other Elk Grove Village teens are determined to swim their way to fame at the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool. Their goal: to break the existing record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes, set in 1968 by six teen-age boys in Buttermere, England.

A hearty effort to break a record

by TOM VON MALDER

Five Elk Grove Village teen-agers are attempting to swim their way into the "Guinnis Book of World Records" and raise money for the Chicago Heart Assn. at the same time.

The youths began a swimming marathon at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool, 999 Leicester Rd. Their aim is to break the record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes set during 11 days in 1968 by six boys, ages 13 to 15 in Buttermere, England.

"We're way ahead of our planned pace," 16-year-old Gary Drake said Monday after he and his friends had swum 66 miles in 27 hours. "We should only have 54 miles by now. Plus, they set the record with six (swimmers) and we have only five."

THE IDEA OF breaking a record came from 17-year-old Jim Cashman whose father is one of the park commissioners. Jim enlisted the cooperation of Craig Culver, 17; Greg Bachus, 16, Tim Bird, 15, and Gary.

"Jim just asked me to do it, and I wasn't doing anything else, so I said yes," Gary said, resting with three of his teammates while Greg swam back and forth in the outdoor pool.

Each swimmer tries to do 144 lengths of the pool, the equivalent of two miles, during his hour. Then he four hours to eat and rest. The swim is to last until 4 p.m. Next Monday, and the swimmers hope to reach 400 miles.

"We stay at the pool, unless we go home for a good meal," Gary said. "We rest in the locker room so we can't hear the other swimmers as easily. We sleep about three times a day.

"WHEN YOU START your hour it's so bad because you know you've got so long to go. Then when there's about 10 minutes left it gets easy. But it's hard to get going again when your next hour comes up."

At the inside pool, which is used as well as the outdoor pool (the swim only need be continuous, not in the same pool), the swimmers have put up a donation for the Heart Assn. which Gary said is starting to fill.

And when it's over? "At the end, I don't know what we'll do. We're probably going to tear the pool apart," Gary said.

tion this year, can be used for loans to other funds.

The revenue projections also do not include potential additional tax revenue from the elimination of the tax rate rollback—a state mandate which requires the district to lower its tax rate. Last week, Gov. Daniel Walker tentatively approved a bill which would eliminate the requirement for cutting the tax rate.

Roderick McLennan, associate superintendent for instructional services, said the amount of additional funds that might be realized from the bill's provisions is not known at this time.

THE BUDGET calls for an 8.8 per cent increase in expenditure in the education fund from $31.9 million last year to $34.8 million this year. The education fund includes salary increases averaging 11 per cent for teachers for the 1976-77 school year and administration salary increases.

The district anticipates a .12 cent drop in expenditures in the building fund from $6,387,171 last year to $6,379,270 this year. The transportation fund shows the greatest increase, 19.54 per cent, from $1.7 million to $2 million.

Other funds include the bond and interest fund, a 5.35 per cent decrease from $4.1 million to $3.9 million; retirement fund, an increase from $854,022 to $921,672, and the site and construction fund, a decrease from $244,118 to $125,000.

Suburbs focus of meter tampering: Edison chief

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island.

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said. Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Bell 911 study approved by village trustees

A proposed study of a 911 emergency telephone system for Palatine was approved Monday night by the village board.

The village board approved the study after village Pres. Wendell Jones said Illinois Bell Telephone Co. officials told him a study of the 911 system for Palatine would be conducted by the utility free if "concrete interest" were shown by the board.

The study will determine the number of emergency phone calls made in an area outlined by Bell which includes telephones with the prefix numbers 358-359,991.

IF THE 911 SYSTEM were in effect now, Jones said, emergency calls made within the area lying outside the village limits, but containing the 358, 359 and 991 prefixes, would come into the Palatine Police Dept. dispatcher.

"I just don't know whether, first, we can handle all those calls, and, second, whether we would want that responsibility," Jones said. "If the percentage of the emergency calls in that Bell area which is outside the Palatine limits is something pretty small, we could probably transfer the calls manually."

If the percentage is higher than 40 per cent, Jones said, the village would "have to think again" about the 911 system.

Jones wants the phone company to determine whether it could automatically reroute 911 calls to the appropriate emergency service.

FOR EXAMPLE, if an Inverness resident, living within the prefix area, were to dial 911, would it be possible for that call to ring in Barrington's police department, which serves Inverness, instead of in Palatine, Jones asked.

"Bell can do almost anything with its computers," Jones said. "It just depends on whether the cost is too great."

Under the 911 system, a resident can reach emergency service without dialing the entire seven-digit phone number.

The system is operating in Oak Park and Chicago and is being considered by other metropolitan areas.

Harrises guilty in kidnap case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

No parking Thursday, Friday

Downtown street work planned

Parking will be prohibited on sections of several downtown Palatine streets Thursday and Friday because of street resurfacing, Village Engineer Robrt Miller said.

Miller said that work will begin at 6:30 a.m. Thursday on S. Railroad Street between Brockway and Bothwell streets; Slade Street between Greeley Street and the railroad tracks; Brockway Street between Palatine Road and the railroad tracks; and Bothwell Street between Palatine Road and the railroad tracks.

Resurfacing will be done Friday on Wilson Street between Brockway Street and Plum Grove Road; North Railroad Street between Brockway Streeet and Plum Grove Road; Brockway Street between the railroad tracks and Woods Street; Bothwell Street between the railroad tracks and Wilson Street; and part of Parking Lot No. 2 adjacent to N. Railroad Street, between Bothwell Street and Plum Grove Road.

The road resurfacing project is part of an $80,666 contract with Arrow Road Construction Co. to resurface or add asphalt to various roads throughout the village. The project is being funded by the village from motor fuel tax funds, Miller said.

MILLER SAID all resurfacing scheduled for the village should be completed by Aug. 18.

"The only inconvenience will be parking for shoppers in the downtown area on Thursday and Friday," Miller said, noting commuter parking lots will be open, with the exception of a part of lot No. 1.

Along with resurfacing in the central business district, plans include the resurfacing of Cunningham Drive, Juniper Drive and Balsam Lane.

Miller said fuel tax funds also would be used for repaving several residential streets, and for placing a seal coat on surfaced streets to prevent water from seeping under the surface and breaking up the pavement.

Miller also said the railroad crossing on Brockway Street may be graded by the Chicago & North Western Ry. by the end of August.

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

Meter 'fix' linked to area: official

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Meter tampering, which is costing Commonwealth Edison Co. $1 million annually, is concentrated in the West and Northwest suburbs, a company official said Monday.

Hubert H. Nexon, the utility's senior vice president, said an investigation has confirmed meter tampering has occurred in Mount Prospect, Arlington Heights and Palatine among "medium-sized commercial establishments," including several restaurants. Nexon said "businesses of every type" are involved. He would not, however, release the names of those businesses whose electricity meters appear to have been tampered with.

Nexon testified Monday before the Illinois Commerce Commission requesting that Edison be allowed to disconnect electric service unless a customer suspected of meter tampering reimburses the firm within 72 hours of notification.

NEXON DEFINED tampering as, "an apparent deliberate effort to alter the state of the meter so that when the company's meter representative reads it, he will record a reading which reflects less than the customers actual use or actual demand."

Refusing to comment on methods by which the company detects meter tampering, Nexon said, "It might create more opportunity for tampering. It would be educating the public how to do it." He said many times there is physical evidence accompanied by "gross inconsistency" in electric bills.

Other company officials have said there are several adjustable mechanisms inside an electric meter that can be altered to slow the meter, resulting in up to a 40 per cent decline in monthly electric use. Some commercial establishments can save up to $10,000 annually, they said.

Nexon confirmed earlier accounts given to The Herald that meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring. "We suspect someone is selling the service — soliciting on a door-to-door basis. It has proliferated in such an unusual way that, yes, we have some reason to believe it is the result of organized activity."

TWO MOUNT Prospect merchants have confirmed being approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters. Although they were told they could "make money on it," Edward Pung, owner of the Towne Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St., and Donald B. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., refused the offers.

Commonwealth Edison officials have said the electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of a major areawide scheme.

Although some company officials have contended the only way to press charges against a meter tamperer is to "catch him in the act," Nexon refuted his colleagues, saying, "You can find a web of circumstances to implicate a suspect. Murderers usually are not caught red-handed."

Nexon would not elaborate on alternate means by which to arrest a meter tamperer. No arrests have been made by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation in its ongoing probe into meter tampering throughout the Chicago metropolitan area. "More prosecution would be very healthy in affecting our revenue loss," Nexon said.

He said it is important to the firm that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

"In a number of cases, tampering is clear beyond a doubt," Nexon said. "But who did it is not. The problem of getting a criminal conviction is quite difficult."

Nexon would not say how many instances of meter tampering have been discovered, but he admitted, "It is quite widely distributed and can be found in very large numbers of suburban areas. There always has been a certain amount of tampering with meters. There was a very sharp rise in such activities beginning about 18 months ago."

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines. "There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

More members sought for panel

The Palatine Community Council, a group promoting interaction between community organizations, will try to boost its membership with a general meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Palatine Town Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd.

"Right now there are just a handful of organizations represented," said Marion Bauer, executive vice president of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and a member of the community council. "We need representatives of all community organizations if the community council is to work."

One of the main tasks of the council is to draw up a community calendar of events to reduce conflicting dates for social events of various organizations.

A branch of the Palatine Advisory Board, the council also acts as a source of information within the community. The council also will provide a directory of organizations and a monthly newsletter to its members.

THE COUNCIL is reorganizing because of "sparse attendance" at recent meetings, according to Mrs. Bauer.

"If we could just get representatives from schools, churches and community organizations, it would work beautifully," Mrs. Bauer said.

Bruce L. Blanck, chairman of the council, said more than 50 letters explaining the purpose of the council have been sent to Palatine organizations.

He said he hopes Wednesday night's general meeting will "get the ball rolling" for the council's membership drive.

Swimmers make hearty effort to break a record

by TOM VON MALDER

Five Elk Grove Village teen-agers are attempting to swim their way into the "Guinnis Book of World Records" and raise money for the Chicago Heart Assn. at the same time.

The youths began a swimming marathon at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool, 999 Leicester Rd. Their aim is to break the record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes set during 11 days in 1968 by six boys, ages 13 to 15 in Buttermere, England.

"We're way ahead of our planned pace," 16-year-old Gary Drake said Monday after he and his friends had swum 66 miles in 27 hours. "We should only have 54 miles by now. Plus, they set the record with six (swimmers) and we have only five."

THE IDEA OF breaking a record came from 17-year-old Jim Cashman whose father is one of the park commissioners. Jim enlisted the cooperation of Craig Culver, 17; Greg Bachus, 16, Tim Bird, 15, and Gary.

"Jim just asked me to do it, and I wasn't doing anything else, so I said yes," Gary said, resting with three of his teammates while Greg swam back and forth in the outdoor pool.

Each swimmer tries to do 144 lengths of the pool, the equivalent of two miles, during his hour. Then he four hours to eat and rest. The swim is to last until 4 p.m. Next Monday, and the swimmers hope to reach 400 miles.

"We stay at the pool, unless we go home for a good meal," Gary said. "We rest in the locker room so we can't hear the other swimmers as easily. We sleep about three times a day.

"WHEN YOU START your hour it's so bad because you know you've got so long to go. Then when there's about 10 minutes left it gets easy. But it's hard to get going again when your next hour comes up."

At the inside pool, which is used as well as the outdoor pool (the swim only need be continuous, not in the same pool), the swimmers have put up a donation for the Heart Assn. which Gary said is starting to fill.

And when it's over? "At the end, I don't know what we'll do. We're probably going to tear the pool apart," Gary said.

Vacation Bible classes

A vacation Bible school at Palatine's First Assembly of God Church, 200 Home Ave., will be held Monday through Aug. 21 for children between 3 and 12 years old.

Classes will meet from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Transportation will be provided within a five-mile radius of the church. Call 991-1850 or 359-0654 for more information.

Penny carnival Thursday

A penny carnival sponsored by the summer stay-and-play program of the Palatine Park District, will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday at Birchwood Park, Illinois Avenue and Quentin Road.

The penny carnival will feature booths and games ranging in price from 1 to 5 cents. All parents must be accompanied by children.

Library sponsoring film

The Palatine Public Library will sponsor a free presentation of a movie made by the winner of the 1973 Chicago Public Library Young Chicago Filmmaker's Festival at 7 p.m. Aug. 18.

The film, "Mobster's Cortege," was made by George Luthringer, who will be a senior at the University of Southern California.

The movie is for children 10 and older.

New Palatine High attacked by vandals

Vandals smashed windows and damaged a piece of construction equipment, causing $1,500 damage at the site of the new Palatine High School Monday morning.

Police said vandals used bricks and pipes to smash nine reinforced windows and a door window on the first floor of the school, 950 E. Cunningham.

Vandals also cut ignition wires for a trencher that was parked in a fenced-in area at the north end of the school site, police said.

Man, 21, convicted under new pot law

A 21-year-old Palatine man has become the first person convicted under the village's recently-enacted marijuana ordinance, police reported.

Police said Rodney L. Ippolito pleaded innocent to possession of less than 10 grams of marijuana in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Court Thursday, but was found guilty of the charge after a bench trial. He was fined $50 plus $5 court costs.

Ippolito was charged under the village ordinance, enacted April 12, that makes possession of less than 10 grams of cannabis a violation of village statutes, similar to a traffic violation.

Ippolito was arrested June 22 after a Palatine patrolman searched the defendant and discovered the marijuana.

Eagle Park bids to be reviewed

Landscaping bids for Eagle Park will be reviewed by the Palatine Park Board tonight, said Fred Hall, park district director.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Palatine Hills Golf Course clubhouse, 512 W. Northwest Hwy.

The landscape bids for the six-acre park are the main item on the park board's agenda.

Arlington Heights police Monday arrested two Arlington Park Race Track employes and charged them with battery and drug offenses.

Police said Percy Garner, 37, and Ken Clark, 30, both of dormitory No. 3 at the race track, were arrested at 9:24 a.m. Monday following a scuffle involving Clark and two Arlington Park security agents.

Sgt. L. Drisk and Patrolman Donald F. McKeating Jr., of Arlington Park security, were following up a report of a burglary to Clark's room Monday morning when Clark became abusive and threatening after the security agents entered his room, police said.

Clark struggled with the security agents, and McKeating received a severe bite on his right hand while Drisk received bruises to his legs, police said.

A search of Clark's and Garner's belongings by security agents turned four grams of marijuana and a hypodermic needle and syringe, police said.

Clark was charged with possession of a hypodermic needle and syringe, possession of marijuana and two counts of battery. Garner was charged with possession of marijuana and of a hypodermic syringe.

The pair was released on personal recognizance and ordered to appear Aug. 20 in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Hurricane Belle pummels Long Island

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hurricane Belle, shifting slightly but suddenly westward towards land, Monday night directed 100-mile-per-hour winds at Jones Beach and the most densely populated areas of suburban Long Island

"All of a sudden it made a little wiggle toward the west and that means it's moving across from the sea to the land further west than we thought," said Harold Gibson of the National Weather Service.

The hurricane — the first of the season — approached Jones Beach off the southern tier of Long Island shortly before midnight.

Gibson said storm's eye was on a course due north across the 25-mile width of Long Island toward the north shore at Oyster Bay, where an already high tide caused by full-moon conditions was feared to reach record heights.

Shortly before midnight, the storm's center was just south of Long Island moving north at 25 to 30 m.p.h. Winds swept the shoreline at 100 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. Fringe winds reaching from 50-70 m.p.h. swept westward toward New York City. New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey activated 1,000 National Guardsmen to aid residents in the metropolitan area.

Earlier Belle remained far enough out to sea in its daylong sweep up the Atlantic coast from North Carolina past New Jersey to keep damage to a minimum. Hundreds of thousands were evacuated from low-lying regions along the way and most returned to coastlines after Belle passed.

"High winds and tides will be the main problem in coastal areas," the bureau said Because of the strong gravitational pull of a full moon tides already were high, and meteorologists said tides could rise 12 to 15 feet above normal in some inlets.

No injuries or deaths were attributed directly to the storm but five persons were killed in an auto accident on a rain-slick highway in North Carolina.

The Weather Service said Belle early Monday evening turned toward the New York Metropolitan area — home of 18 million people in densely populated areas New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Thousands of lowland residents were evacuated or told to prepare to seek higher ground along the Eastern seaboard from Maryland to Maine.

But Belle moved north past North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware while still far out into Atlantic, and hurricane watches and warnings for those states were lifted. But damage was reported from high winds, flash flooding and high tides caused by the gale force winds that pushed 100 miles toward the coast.

Still in the hurricane's path, officials in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts moved thousands of residents to high ground, put National Guard and Civil Defense units on alert and warned citizens — even those inland — of flash-flooding and advised them to prepare themselves in the event of power outages.

In Rhode Island, martial law was declared in the coastal towns of Narragansett, South Kingstown and Cranston to force unwilling residents

Balanced budget for Dist. 214 seen by officials

The 1976-77 tentative budget for High School Dist. 214 that calls for expenditures of $48 million, a 6.63 per cent increase from last year's $45 million budget, will permit a balanced budget, school officials said Monday.

"We should live within our revenues," said board member John Costello. He said surplus funds totaling more than $7 million in the five major accounts will allow the district to prevent deficit spending this year although expenditures will exceed new revenue by about $2 million.

THE DISTRICT anticipates receiving $46 million from property taxes, state aid and other sources in the five major funds—the education, building bond and interest, transportation and retirement funds. The 1976-77 revenue is expected to be 16.5 per cent greater than last year's revenue of $39.6 million.

The district also anticipates receiving $55,000 in the site and construction fund and an additional $1.1 million in the working cash fund. The working cash fund which will total $15.2 million this year, can be used for loans to other funds.

The revenue projections also do not include potential additional tax revenue from the elimination of the tax rate rollback--a state mandate which requires the district to lower its tax rate. Last week, Gov. Daniel Walker tentatively approved a bill which would eliminate the requirement for cutting the tax rate.

Roderick McLennan, associate superintendent for instructional services, said the amount of additional funds that might be realized from the bill's provisions is not known at this time.

THE BUDGET calls for an 8.8 per cent increase in expenditure in the education fund from $31.9 million last year to $34.8 million this year. The education fund includes salary increases averaging 11 per cent for teachers for the 1976-77 school year and administration salary increases.

The district anticipates a .12 cent drop in expenditures in the building fund from $6,387,171 last year to $6,379,270 this year. The transportation fund shows the greatest increase, 19.54 per cent, from $1.7 million to $2 million.

Harrises guilty in kidnap case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris were found guilty by a Superior Court jury Monday of kidnaping and robbery in an SLA crime spree with Patricia Hearst.

The jury acquitted the Harrises on six counts of assault with a deadly weapon. The Harrises were found guilty of kidnaping Thomas Mathews, a high school athlete, and Frank Sutter, a middle-aged man and gave them a ride during a wild flight across the city after the shooting at a sporting goods store.

The jury also found them guilty of the theft of two automobiles and stealing $250 and a car from Sutter.

The young Indianans took the verdict with no show of emotion, slouching in their chairs in the bulletproof glass courtroom. They face a maximum penalty of 1 to 25 years in prison on the charge of kidnaping Mathews.

The verdict came after nine days of deliberations and in the face of a last-minute motion by defense attorney Leonard Weinglass for a mistrial and dismissal of the indictment on grounds the jury had been prejudiced by incidents in the jury room during the selection process.

Miss Hearst, the newspaper heiress they are accused of kidnaping and converting to their radical cause, faces trial on the same charges beginning Jan. 10.

A few hours before the verdict, Deputy Sheriff Dennis Banowetz had testified that during jury selection a pros-

Today

by KURT BAER

A chapter in the personal history book of the Northwest suburbs came quietly to an end not long ago. But unless you know Dr. Edwin M. McGill, or were one of his patients, you probably missed it.

You missed it because life in the Northwest suburbs is too big and too busy to pause over the departure of one man. And that is part of the reason why McGill, 54, is leaving the Village of Arlington Heights for the small town of Kerrville, Tex. (population 12,672).

"When I came out here there were about 9,500 people in Arlington Heights. Today, I guess there's about 75,000. We've become part of such a large metropolitan area that I'm looking for something slower paced," he says.

McGILL WAS A kind of pioneer, one of the first specialists in obstetrics and gynecology to set up practice in the Northwest suburbs. There was not even a hospital in the area when he opened his office.

"The phone book listed between 9 and 12 doctors, almost all general practitioners and of these, three were either retiring or retired. The nearest hospital was in Evanston or Resurrection Hospital in (northwest) Chicago," he says.

McGill was a charter member of the medical staff at Northwest Community Hospital when it opened in December 1959, and served two consecutive terms as the hospital's first medical staff president.

"Where I'm going (Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in Kerrville) is much the same kind of hospital Northwest Community was when it first opened," says McGill, who readily admits to a certain feeling of deja vu in connection with his move.

ONE DIFFERENCE he is longing for is a lower birth rate in Kerrville than he has known in the child-prone Northwest suburbs. McGill estimates that he has delivered 6,000 babies into the world during his practice here. "That's a small town," he says almost sheepishly.

There is no bitterness in his voice when McGill talks about leaving the Northwest suburbs. The people and the practice have been good to him. "The towns just grew," he says.

In a practice where 45-to 50-hour weeks were a minimum, McGill decided it was time to get out.

"I'll sacrifice some money. You can't slow down and expect to go along with the same income. I haven't really looked into the economics of medicine in Kerrville. I don't know what an average fee is there.

"Hopefully what I will have is a little time to hunt and fish."

BEFORE HE LEFT, McGill sent a letter to his many patients offering referral to another doctor. There are many obstetricians and gynecologists on the staffs of local hospitals today and care "is readily available," he says.

McGill says his new home town is "rolling and hilly" country some 60 miles northwest of San Antonio in the vicinity of the LBJ ranch. Deer and other game animals are common.

Innocent in bribe case: Monoson

Former Wheeling Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson pleaded innocent Monday to charges of bribery and official misconduct. Cook County Criminal Court Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald set bail at $10,000, but released Monoson on his own recognizance. His trial is set for Sept. 7 before Judge Warren Wolfson. Monoson's attorney, Thomas Foran, asked that his client be released without bond, saying Monoson is a family man and had lived in this area all his life. Monoson ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket. He was indicted July 29 and is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

Village gets first race track tax

Arlington Heights has received a $73,000 check representing its first share of 10-cent-per-person admission tax charged at Arlington Park Race Track. The village will receive another payment for the final two months of the racing season, which ends Oct. 2, said Village Finance Director Kenneth Bonder. The tax, enacted through a new state racing law, was "the balancing factor in the (village's) budget, this year," Bonder said. "We had to cut about $1 million worth of budget requests this year, but this (admission tax) helped us to keep services we had right on par," he said.

that more suspects be prosecuted, but he said Edison is concerned primarily with recovering the money it has lost for its services. "We've acted on enough commercial establishments that we are in the process of collecting $700,000," he said.

The company has received the money by billing, on a prorated basis, those businesses whose meters apparently have been tampered with.

THE COMPANY, which serves three million commercial and residential customers in Illinois, sampled 700 of its commercial electric meters. "We were satisfied tampering had occurred" in 1 per cent of those, Nexon said.

"Tampering is also apparent in residential meters but there are no significant changes," Nexon said. "We have not made a residential sample. It is not the focus of our current investigation. Residential tampering is less important because the individual amounts are smaller."

As a result of the increased incidents of meter tampering, Commonwealth Edison in June filed with the ICC to insert a paragraph regarding meter tampering into its current "terms and conditions of service" statement. Nexon said now there are no specifics regarding tampering in the firm's operational guidelines.

"There are some general provisions that apply which ought to be toughened up," he said.

Nexon told the ICC the thrust of Commonwealth Edison's proposal is remedial. "We don't want to impose a penalty, hardship or accusation," he said. "We are heightening our vigilance and purchasing tamper-proof meters. But there is no fool-proof way of preventing tampering that we know of."

13 tickets issued on sprinkling curb

Thirteen tickets have been issued to violators of a week-old Mount Prospect lawn sprinkling restriction. Village Mgr. Edward A. Geick said Monday.

"Considering last week was a fairly cool week with no hot sun requiring a lot of sprinkling, this doesn't tell us too much," Geick said. "This week will tell us a better story. I should imagine with more warm weather more tickets will be issued."

The 11 citations issued by police and two issued by public works employes were to persons watering on days and during hours when outdoor sprinkling now is prohibited, Geick said.

The ordinance went into effect Aug. 1 and is intended to reduce water usage to offset dropping water levels in Mount Prospect's 10 operating wells.

UNDER THE NEW ordinance, all outdoor sprinkling is prohibited on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Sprinkling also is restricted between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays. Newly seeded and sodded lawns are exempt from the restrictions for two weeks after their installation. Residents may be fined up to $500 for violating the ordinance.

Police, fire prevention officers, building inspectors and public works employes are authorized to issue tickets to violators.

"I have heard of no complaints in issuing a ticket yet," Geick said. "There have been no complications. So far everything is going smoothly.

"I am pretty happy with the results so far," he added. "But then again, we're only a week old."

Two hospitalized after gang attack

Two persons were hospitalized early Monday after they were beaten by an unidentified assailant wielding a baseball bat in Mount Prospect, police reported.

Chris Bell, 19, of 2311 Sherwood Ave., Arlington Heights, and Thomas Knaber, 16, of 1105 Brentwood Ln., Mount Prospect, told police they were attacked by a group of between 17 and 20 youths about 12:30 a.m. at Burning Bush and Tano lanes.

Bell was treated and released from Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, following the incident. Knaber was listed in fair condition Monday night, a hospital spokesman said.

Police said Bell and Knaber and three companions met the group of youths, who asked them about the owner of a car parked in the area.

Members of the group reportedly said they were from Chicago and a friend of theirs had been hospitalized by the driver of a blue car.

Police said an argument ensued and Bell and Knaber were struck on the back of their heads by one of the youths, who was carrying a baseball bat.

The three youths accompanying Bell and Knaber were unharmed.

Mount Prospect police Monday said they are investigating the incident, but have only a vague description of the group members as between 17 and 20 years old. One of the members is reported to have a blond, Afro-style haircut.

Swimmers make hearty effort to break a record

by TOM VON MALDER

Five Elk Grove Village teen-agers are attempting to swim their way into the "Guinnis Book of World Records" and raise money for the Chicago Heart Assn. at the same time.

The youths began a swimming marathon at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Elk Grove Park District's Disney Pool, 999 Leicester Rd. Their aim is to break the record of 300 miles in 230 hours 39 minutes set during 11 days in 1968 by six boys, ages 13 to 15 in Buttermere, England.

"We're way ahead of our planned pace," 16-year-old Gary Drake said Monday after he and his friends had swum 66 miles in 27 hours. "We should only have 54 miles by now. Plus, they set the record with six (swimmers) and we have only five."

THE IDEA OF breaking a record came from 17-year-old Jim Cashman whose father is one of the park commissioners. Jim enlisted the cooperation of Craig Culver, 17; Greg Bachus, 16, Tim Bird, 15, and Gary.

"Jim just asked me to do it, and I wasn't doing anything else, so I said yes," Gary said, resting with three of his teammates while Greg swam back and forth in the outdoor pool.

Each swimmer tries to do 144 lengths of the pool, the equivalent of two miles, during his hour. Then he four hours to eat and rest. The swim is to last until 4 p.m. Next Monday, and the swimmers hope to reach 400 miles.

"We stay at the pool, unless we go home for a good meal," Gary said. "We rest in the locker room so we can't hear the other swimmers as easily. We sleep about three times a day.

"WHEN YOU START your hour it's so bad because you know you've got so long to go. Then when there's about 10 minutes left it gets easy. But it's hard to get going again when your next hour comes up."

At the inside pool, which is used as well as the outdoor pool (the swim only need be continuous, not in the same pool), the swimmers have put up a donation for the Heart Assn. which Gary said is starting to fill.

And when it's over? "At the end, I don't know what we'll do. We're probably going to tear the pool apart," Gary said.

SATELLITE PHOTO taken at 11 a.m. Monday shows Hurricane Belle located just northeast of Cape Hatteras. According to the National Hurricane Center in Miami, the highest observed winds are 110 m.p.h. at the center of the storm. A band of heavy clouds extends north of the hurricane through New England to Canada. Scattered clouds cover the northern Plains, while a band of high clouds extends from Arizona and New Mexico to Colorado.

Return of library funds to be discussed tonight

Restoration of $160,995 previously cut from the Mount Prospect Public Library 1976-77 budget will be reviewed tonight at a joint meeting of the village and library boards.

The special meeting on library finances will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the public safety building, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

The meeting was called after petitions signed by 3,000 village residents were presented to village trustees in July, urging a larger appropriation for the public library.

IN APRIL, the village board allocated $357,100 of the $518,095 requested by the library board to operate the library in 1976-77. The library board contends the amount is insufficient to adequately stock and operate the new $3.2 million library building at Central Road and Main Street.

Expected to be reviewed tonight is a compromise in the village-library budget struggle proposed by Trustee E. F. Richardson in which the village would contribute an additional $5,000 if the library reduces its budget requests by $75,995, thus eliminating the deficit.

Richardson proposes eliminating the library newsletter and cutting the personnel, book and building budgets.

Although the new library is scheduled to open in October, library board members are speculating a move into the new building will be delayed unless the village allocates more funds. Library officials already have closed the present library, 14 E. Busse Ave., on Saturdays and stopped all new book orders as a result of the budget cutback.

Village officials have been reluctant to allocate more money for library operations because only $325,000 is raised through the library's tax levy which is collected by the village.
